Don't know whether you remember her—the Hollywood parade moves on so swiftly—but, about two-and-a-half years ago, Beulah Hutton was under contract to Universal. She was a beauty and had a chance at a career. Then came an auto accident that scarred her face. In course of time, she got a job as stand-in at 20th-Century-Fox for Virginia Field, Shirley Deane and several others.

Well, the story has a happy ending. Time and surgery have removed the scars and Beulah is to get that rare thing, a second opportunity. She becomes an actress again in a new Jones Family picture.

Stars are superstitious people. Isa Miranda's first real success in European pictures happened to coincide with the hiring of a Russian secretary, Eugenia Andamir. When Isa came to Hollywood to make "Zaza", her secretary didn't have a quota number and had to stay at home. But "Zaza" didn't turn out so well. Claudette Colbert had to take over the part. Now, Isa is about to try again in "Hotel Imperial". And this time the secretary is here.

In case you haven't noticed, the letters of the secretary's name Andamir, can be rearranged and made to spell Miranda.

Who's your favorite screen Lincoln? McGlynn, Billings, Joseph Henrichy ("The Birth of a Nation"), Charles Middleton, Huston or John Carradine?

Can't imagine Tyrone Power playing the part, even though young Lincoln, and don't believe Zerkow has any such plans for "Lawyer of the West". However, Gary Cooper will be a popular choice if Samuel Goldwyn decides to star him in "Abe Lincoln in Illinois".

Paramount also has to find a Lincoln for "Gettysburg". It's a refreshing prospect, to say the least.

We've seen Hollywood glorify so many British heroes. Why not turn the spotlight on a few Americans?

See where the Bob Montgomerys arrived in New London, Conn., by train and had to be locked in the station to escape a crowd of 1,000 fans. Yet Joel McCrea tells me that he and Frances Dee drove all the way to Rye, N. Y., and back, without being recognized.

Motoring would seem to be the ideal way for stars to escape notice. If they REALLY want to.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL Copyright, 1938 King Features Syndicate, Inc.

HOLLYWOOD.—You soon will be seeing a new Lincoln cycle on the screen. It is not surprising. For about the martyred president always have been well received and have made money. The first life of Lincoln was produced by the old Edison stock company. Frank McMillan played the president. Then came the Rockett Brothers' "Abraham Lincoln" in 1924.

The late George Billings was starred and the picture cost $180,000 and showed a nice profit. Four years later, D. W. Griffith gave the screen another Lincoln, Walter Huston. Huston's shoes had to be built up four and one-half inches to give him the required height. The film cost $450,000 and, three years ago, had returned its makers $1,150,000. It still is earning Griffith about $10,000 a year in royalties.
