

Mother Wants "Sold" Baby Back

Mrs. Isabelle Farrell and Don Harmon. Claiming that "the only reason we let it go was because the doctor threatened to send us to jail unless we gave it to him," Mrs. Isabelle Farrell, 24, of Cleveland, whose baby was "sold" to a Pittsburgh family for $50, now plans a fight for custody of the month-old child. The baby's father, Don Harmon, is shown with Mrs. Farrell as they were arraigned on statutory charges. A charge of illegal child placing was filed against the doctor alleged to have arranged the "sale" to the Pittsburgh family for $50. The doctor, Dr. John W. Tippie, of Medina, gave himself up on the warrant.

"AIR MAIL BRIDE"

by HAZEL LIVINGSTON

CHAPTER XXVIII
"I just don't understand you!" Marie cried, exasperated, hours later, as they lay wakeful and inimical in bed.
"I don't understand you." "Oh, Edward! What can I say? How can I make you see? I've gone through—through hell—"
"That's pretty language—"
"YOU never say anything like that!"
"Never mind me—it doesn't suit you."
"All right, then. I've been unhappy, and I've put up with more than I thought anyone ever had to put up with since we got married—"
"Well, if that's the way you feel about me—"
"Oh, Edward! Please—please let's not quarrel. Everyone else around here quarrels. Surely we can discuss a few things without flying at each other! Edward, you know I love you. If I didn't, I wouldn't have stayed when nobody but you wanted me, and your own mother as good as put me out yesterday. What that sort of thing does to any girl's pride—"
"I've told you not to mind Mom. She can't help it."
"Oh she CAN help it. It's your father I'm sorry for. He has provoked enough to drive a saint crazy, but if he loses his temper then you say bitter things about him. You have a mother complex!"
He laughed at that, and then she laughed, too. He put an arm around her. "But you love me a little in spite of it?"
"I suppose so. But let's be serious. Honey, if you're to do the thing you really want to do—go up and get into that land deal in Humboldt, we need money, both to put into it, and to get out of debt here. That IS what you want to do, isn't it?"
"I've dreamed of it for years. Never had the money, that's all."
"Honey, I know! But you're just wasting your time here! The kind of work you ought to have just isn't here! You've said time and time again that you hate office work, that the reason you went on those boat trips and worked as a ranger—even the movies—was just to get away and try to express yourself—"
He was really interested now. "That's it. I COULD get a job selling bonds. It's a question of waiting around for the chance. But, heck! I don't really WANT to sell bonds. I'm not a grubby desk man, writing down figures in a book! I worked three months in a bank once, and I nearly went nuts. I always thought that that bank background was enough to account for Bee's friend Ritchie dodging reality the way he did—"
"Some business men aren't that way!"
"Mm—maybe not. But I'm no business man. I'm just a swash-buckling adventurer, I guess. You've got to take me or leave me, honey. Follow me, and you'll never know whether you'll end up in China, where I was in '33, or Singapore! Now if I can get the cash to get into this land business while it's in its infancy—and that's where I belong—that's what I want—why, before I make a rich man's wife out of you, I'll make a pioneer out of you! You'll just have to take it as it comes, thick and thin and be ready for anything. But I can't horn in without SOME capital!"
"Edward, that's what I was getting to. It will be hard to get ahead, because we owe so much money, and you really need a new suit terribly. That gray flannel—"
"I know. It looks like the devil. That's one reason why I haven't been more aggressive. A man can't go into a first-class place looking like a tramp and expect to command attention. Confound it—if I only had a job—any kind of a job!"

"But you'll get one now. I FEEL it. And with what you'll be making, and I'll be making—"
"What YOU'LL be making!"
He had forgotten about that. "I don't suppose it will be so much, and it's temporary, but it will be SOME-THING. Oh, I didn't tell you, but Walt wants us both to have lunch with him at the Palace tomorrow, to talk about the job, and he wants to meet you, too."
"Yes? I'll look swell at the Palace, with the seat of my pants worn through!"
"Oh, honey—you're so good looking—you can get by anywhere!"
"Well—I'll go—but mind you. I don't want to."
"Just before they went to sleep he asked, 'Is he married?'"
Drowsily she answered, "Is who married?"
"Your friend, Walt."
"Walt! Heavens, yes. I don't remember when he wasn't. We've known Flo almost as long as we've known Walt!"
She was wide awake again. She was going to tell him all about Flo, who was once a dancer. But Edward was asleep.

They were to meet Carson in the lounge of the hotel. As they walked down the long corridor, and found seats in the high-backed chairs. Marie and Edward exchanged secret, knowing smiles. They both thought of another hotel lounge, and another meeting. Their fingers touched. It wasn't possible that they two were strangers not five months ago!
They were smiling still, when Walter Carson came in to look for them.
He felt old, and a little out of it. It was a new sensation. He didn't remember ever having felt that way before, and it didn't make him feel any kinder toward the young man whom he had already decided was far from a heavyweight.
But nothing in his cordial, welcoming smile betrayed his feelings. He held out a large, warm hand. His genial voice boomed.
"This is Edward! The luckiest young man I know! This is a big day for me, meeting you both. I'm still wondering how I ever bumped into Marie Theresa yesterday, in Oakland. I didn't even know she was married. I still think she should be playing with dolls. You robbed the cradle, Wilson!"
Marie laughed, as she always did at Walt's flattering nonsense. One hand strayed up to touch her back hair. She wished it were curled.
Edward began to speak, but Carson herded them before him, into the Rose room, where a table had been reserved.
He ordered the lunch, solicitously asking for suggestions from Edward, adding, "Does that sound all right to you, Marie Theresa?"
Marie Theresa....
Edward wished he'd thought of calling her that. She'd signed all her letters to him that way. He'd addressed her that way, too. But when they met it seemed simple and natural to say "Marie."
Now he saw that Marie Theresa was much more effective. More worldly.
In spite of the cocktails and the excellent lunch, Edward was in an unhappy frame of mind. He thought of the shabby suit he was wearing, and contrasted it with Carson's well-tailored tweeds. He wished he hadn't come.
And then he found himself answering the fellow's questions. Non-committally at first. Carson, it appeared, had had a pretty humdrum life, in spite of Marie's lurid circus and evening. The evening service will be broadcast from the Billy Sunday Tabernacle over a nation-wide mutual hookup covering Alaska as well as America. A special musical attraction on the evening of the Fourth of July will be an artist recital by John Carter, one of the greatest young American tenors of the day. Carter is a brilliant, outstanding tenor of the Metropolitan Opera association.

This company has been uniquely successful through the depression. In line with our steady gain in business the earnings of our men are higher. Not only are more men earning $50 to $75 a week, but in recent months we have issued commissions running from $100 to $125 throughout the entire country. These earnings of course are generally made by more experienced men but there are exceptions where new men have quickly advanced themselves to higher income.

Similar openings are available locally to a few more men qualified to learn this work, and who would be satisfied with earning $125 monthly while learning, providing they saw opportunities for increases with experience. The men accepted for these opportunities will be given a thorough course of training free of charge. For personal interview call at Rice Hotel in Decatur between 9 and 12 Thursday morning.
