MINNESOTA AND MICHIGAN TILT IS HEADLINER

Clash At Ann Arbor; Ohio State To Play Northwestern

Chicago, Oct. 24.—(UP)—Minnesota and Michigan pick up tomorrow exactly where they left off in the mud and gloom last October—struggling for the Big Ten football championship with the eyes of the nation upon them.

They played the game of the year in 1940 and seem destined to do it again. Each is undefeated and untied. On almost any list of national rankings they'll run one-two.

The "one" is for Minnesota. This bonerusher is hailed by many observers as Bernie Bierman's master creation, superior even to the terrific team of 1934. It has speed, power, depth and deception but Michigan remains unconvinced.

Despite the unexpected stretching of Michigan's defenses by Iowa and Northwestern, the Wolverines will take a lot of convincing before surrendering the conference championship to Minnesota for the second year in a row.

The little brown jug for which these teams have fought since 1903 has passed through many a tale of heartbreak, none more bitter to Michigan than a 7 to 6 defeat last year after Tommy Harmon had fallen on his face in the mud inches from Minnesota's goal line. Memory of that defeat is enough to bring Michigan to the heights.

The meeting of the undefeated Giants far outshines another crucial Big Ten game. At Ohio State, Paul Brown's Bucks face a major threat in Northwestern. Illinois of Bill De Correvont, just released from a hospital after treatment for a severe cold, may be the big break for Northwestern's prize sophomore, Otto Graham, De Correvont's capable understudy. With or without De Correvont, Northwestern is a favorite.

Also scheduled in conference games are Indiana at Wisconsin and Iowa at Purdue. Illinois travels to Notre Dame.

Indiana's conference debut will be watched closely. Bo-McMillen gave his sophomores experience the hard way, against Detroit, Notre Dame, Texas Christian and Nebraska. Victory over Nebraska indicates the Hoosiers may be ready to roll and if they get by Wisconsin they'll have to be considered in the title race. Their only major opponent in three remaining conference games is Northwestern—with a traditionally tough one against Purdue.

Minnesota's chief concern is stopping Bob Westfall, Michigan's spinning fullback. Westfall's center-of-the-line assaults split Iowa and Northwestern for valuable yardage.

In turn, Michigan must try to halt Minnesota's latest touchdown twins—Bill Dailey and Bruce Smith—with a line lacking in reserves.

Today's Sports Parade (Reg. U. S. Pat. Office) By Harry Ferguson

New York, Oct. 24.—(UP)—Chicago Bears 175, opponents 45.

There you have it, brethren—a short, sweet story of the sweetest football team now operating anywhere in these United States. You take the Carlisle Indians, the four horsemen of Notre Dame and Michigan's point a minute team. I'll take those babies in Chicago who run from the T formation and roll up scores that make you think they are playing basketball.

All this is apropos of the fact that the howl of "break up the Bears" is beginning to be heard. It now has become apparent that nobody can offer serious competition to the Bears, not even the best clubs in the national league, the fastest football circuit in the country.

In four games the Bears have piled up 175 points to their opponents 45. They have been pressed in only one game, the season opener against the Green Bay Packers, which found the Bears on top, 25 to 17. Since then they have swamped Cleveland, 48 to 21; blasted the Chicago Cardinals, 53 to 7; and murdered the Detroit Lions, 49 to 0. On Sunday they will take the Pittsburgh Steelers over the hurdles—and you can count on it.

The cry of "break up the Bears" is not coming entirely from the men who own and coach the other teams in the pro league. Most of the owners are like young Alexis Thompson, proprietor of the Philadelphia Eagles, who says the job is not to break up the Bears but to build a pit to them. It's quite a job and it's not something that you can do overnight. George Halas and his assistants didn't build the Bears overnight and they are not going to let them disintegrate quickly either.

This is nothing new in the realm of sports, this emergence of a great organization that is unbeatable. It happened in baseball a few years ago when the New York Yankees put together the right ingredients, stirred vigorously and came out with quite a tasty dish.

The calamity howlers were saying that the domination of the Yankees would kill interest in baseball. They couldn't see any end to the Yankees' skein of victories. But the old gentleman with the scythe—old Father Time who licks 'em all eventually—stepped in and took charge. Right now he looks like the only thing that would be favored over the Bears.

Hunting Prospects Brighter As Clubs Liberate 157,182 Pheasant And Quail

Hoosier sportsmen, awaiting the opening of the quail and pheasant hunting season in Indiana on November 10, were informed today by Hush A. Barnhart, director of the Department of Conservation, that 157,182 quail and pheasants have been liberated in recent weeks by the conservation clubs.

This means, he pointed out, a substantial addition to the already large populations of these popular game birds and is another assurance that the hunting season this year should be one of the best that the present generation has experienced. Previous reports have indicated quail and pheasants more numerous throughout the state, due to previous stocking and to favorable weather conditions during the nesting season.

This year with over nine hundred conservation club brooders in operation, the clubs have reared and liberated 69,389 quail and 793 pheasants to establish a new record for the state. Day-old chicks were furnished the clubs by the Division of Fish and Game from the Wells county and Jasper-Pulaski state game farms. Under contract agreements the clubs receive a stipulated amount for each quail or pheasant reared and liberated.

There were more clubs participating in the game bird propagation program this year, more brooders in operation, and more eggs handled at the game farms. This program was inaugurated four years ago and has grown rapidly, its success attracting widespread attention to Indiana.

Due to the rapid growth of this program and its cost, the amount returned to the clubs for brooder operation will be reduced then contracts are awarded for 1942.
