For Five Million Farms

More than 800,000 tons of potash materials for fertilizer use left American mines and refineries last year for farming areas where soil deficiency of potash—an essential plant food—is limiting crop production. About two-thirds of this tonnage was in the form of muriate of potash (60-63% K<sub>2</sub>O), a form highly concentrated to reduce the Farmer's fertilizer freight bill. Immediately upon the outbreak of war in 1939, the American Potash Industry began a rapid increase in production capacity. This expansion program is still continuing to meet the demands for increased food production—FOOD for VICTORY.
