Durham Defense May Finish Case Today

Only One Defendant Remains To Testify

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 16-(UP)—Defense counsel at the Durham Manufacturing Corp. conspiracy trial was expected to rest its case today. The government has charged the company and nine of its employees with conspiring to conceal defects in war materials built for the navy.

Carroll R. Howell, the only defendant who has not completed his testimony, told the court yesterday that as a plant superintendent he knew about the practices which the government claimed were used to conceal defects in rocket bombs, propeller shafts and shells.

He said his issuance of orders for blocking bomb threads, welding in salvage operation when navy rejection marks were regular procedure in salvage operation when navy inspectors were present.

"I believe I did right," Howell said, "and if I had the job to do over again I would do the same thing."

When asked if he had ever stretched an undersized bomb, Howell said a bomb could not be stretched.

Other witnesses for the defense during the day were Ivan Dicks, civil service employee at the Crane Ammunition Depot, Ind., and Lt. George Hamilton, USN, who supervised rocket motor and booster loading at the depot.

They were questioned about what precautions were taken in handling the rocket bombs after they were shipped from Durham to the depot and loaded with TNT.

Hamilton said pressure, heat and other conditions were needed to explode the bombs. Under cross-examination, however, he admitted that pressure alone might cause a cracked or defective bomb to explode.

Hamilton said that "some" of the bombs made at Durham were test-fired and none was found defective.

tion." He noted that it was in conformity with a report made by a House Naval Affairs subcommittee after a wartime tour of Pacific bases.

The subcommittee recommended that for security of both the United States and the Western Hemisphere, this country "should have at least dominating control over the former Japanese mandated islands of the Marshalla, the Carolines, and the Marianas—commonly known as 'Micronesia'—and over the outlying Japanese islands of the Izu, Bonins and Ryukyu."

The navy has announced that among the Pacific bases it considers vital to U. S. security are Okinawa (in the Ryukyu group), Saipan in the Marianas, two Jima in the Volcano group and the Bonin islands, a group lying close to Japan.

All the Rocky Mountain states except Wyoming showed slight increases in federal employment during the past year, according to the civil service commission.

Iranian Dispute To United Nations

Russian-Iranian Problem Unsolved

London, Jan. 16-(UP)—The Iranian delegation disclosed today that it has received new instructions from Tehran to place the Iranian dispute with Soviet Russia before the United Nations.

Only yesterday the Iranian ambassador to London, Seyyed Hassan Taqizadeh, told the assembly that he might present the Iranian-Russian quarrel for United Nations consideration if an agreement between the two countries wasn't reached soon.

The Iranian move ran counter to efforts by the big powers to keep controversial issues out of the first assembly's agenda.

The Iranian delegation will meet today to decide whether to raise the issue of relations with Russia in the general assembly or to present it in the newly created security council.

The new instructions from Tehran superseded the speech of Taqizadeh yesterday in which he reserved the right to raise the issue if the big powers failed to solve the Soviet-Iranian problem at this session of the assembly.

Taqizadeh said today that the directive from his government allowed the delegation here to choose whether to raise the matter before the assembly or otherwise.

Only the possible persuasion of the big powers could prevent Iran from raising the question. The U. N. charter provides that "any member of the United Nations may bring any dispute or situation which might lead to international friction to the attention of the assembly or security council."

The first security council meeting was scheduled for tomorrow. But the Iranian issue was not likely to be raised at that time. The session was expected to be devoted to preliminary organization and opening statement.

The first step under the charter for the council would be to recommend to the parties that they try to settle their differences by negotiation, arbitration, judicially, by regional agencies or arrangements, "or other peaceful means of their own choice."

ADM. KIMMEL

Seth W. Richardson, Kimmel related that he returned to San Francisco upon being relieved of his command at Pearl Harbor. He said that on Jan. 25, 1942, he was informed by Rear Adm. J. W. Greenslade, commander of the 12th naval district, that Short had requested retirement.

Kimmel said Greenslade had been telephoned "an official message" from Washington instructing that he be advised of Short's request.

Kimmel said he learned that Greenslade's telephone call from Washington was made by Rear Adm. Randall Jacobs, the chief of the bureau of navigation, at the request of the late secretary of navy Frank Knox.

He said he learned through the press about March 1, 1942, that Knox had directed preparation of charges and specifications preliminary to bringing him to trial at court martial some time in the future.

Neither Kimmel nor Short ever has been subjected to court martial trial for the Pearl Harbor disaster, although both have been criticized in reports of previous investigations. Both the navy and army have said no court martial trials are contemplated.

Kimmel left no doubt that he considered he had been treated unfairly. He submitted to the congressional committee a sheaf of correspondence with Stark and Jacobs in connection with his retirement request.

He took particular exception to the fact that when Knox approved his request for retirement, the secretary said it was done "without condemnation of any offense or prejudice to future disciplinary action."

knows that congress and the president really are waiting to see if the big steel strike is coming off. If steel is struck the showdown in house and senate will come soon after.

Chairman James E. Murray, D. Mont., of the senate labor committee changed his tune yesterday under pressure of colleagues who intimated he was deliberately delaying committee action on the fact-finding bill. Over the weekend Murray thought three or four weeks of committee hearings would be necessary. He thinks now the list of witnesses can be reduced and that the committee should be able to act on the bill by Feb. 1. First witness today was Dr. William Leiserson, professor of labor relations at Johns Hopkins university.

The house labor committee does not seem to be doing much of anything, many of its members being out of the city. But the house military affairs committee meets today. That committee sponsors the Smith-Arends bill to impose heavy penalties on unions which violate no-strike contract pledges.

Chairman Andrew J. May, D. Ky., said his committee probably would wait "a reasonable time" before seeking to bring the Smith-Arends bill to the floor. May thought his military affairs committee should first give the labor committee an opportunity to act—if it intends to—on the president's fact-finding proposals.

House Republican whip Leslie Arends, Ill., said he thought the military affairs committee would give the labor committee until about Feb. 1. If there is no action by that time the pressure for action on the strike penalty bill will be very heavy.

1913, West Point, N. Y.: A straggling squad of 18 football players came out of the Midwest to battle the mighty Cadets... to give them a "breather." The New York newspapers sent cub reporters to watch the workout. And they saw plenty! They saw forward passing the like of which had never before been seen on an eastern gridiron. They saw the brass young men from the prairies take a 14-13 lead at the half, and go on to win, 35-13, in a game that established Notre Dame as a football power. And three of the touchdown passes were caught by Notre Dame's captain, a tow-headed end—named—KNUTE ROCKNE.
