

Hungary May Sign Russia Trade Pact

Economic Plight May Force Signing

Washington, Jan. 22 — (UP) — Diplomatic observers believed today that Hungary's sore economic plight would compel her to sign the "50-50" trade pact with Russia despite American and British objections.

Under the pending agreement, Russia would take some 50 percent of the shares in major Hungarian factories in exchange for efforts of sorely needed foods and raw materials to Hungary.

Information reaching this government indicates that the Hungarians, faced with whirling inflation and the threat of economic collapse, fear there is no alternative to accepting the proposal.

The United States and Britain have protested against the plan. They told that it would be in violation of the Yalta agreement calling for joint three-power efforts in planning economic recovery of liberated countries. Russia, it was learned, has replied that the proposed pact violates no agreement.

The provisional Hungarian government, it was said, had drafted an economic recovery program of its own but it was blocked by the allied control commission, dominated by the Russian chairman.

The Hungarian program called for foreign credits to bulky and also asked for relief from the heavy war reparations, almost all of which are going to Russia.

The state department had no confirmation of reports that Russia had seized the Lipse oil fields of Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. However, it was said, the situation is somewhat obscured by Russia's unilateral policy in Hungary. Under the Potsdam agreement, Russia is entitled to German assets in Hungary as reparations. Sometimes, it was said, these assets prove to be German subsidiaries of U. S. companies.

old Knutson, Minn., ranking Republican member of the committee, has introduced a bill to repeal the wartime excises.

Most congressional interest centered on the budget portion of the President's message. Reaction was generally divided on party lines. Democrats thought it was fine. Republicans, however, eyed with suspicion the President's efforts to move toward a balanced budget.

Mr. Truman forecast government spending in the 1947 fiscal year at $35,860,000,000 and income at $31,513,000,000, leaving a deficit of $4,347,000,000. He said the deficit, lowest in years, could be covered by drawing on the treasury's fund of available cash.

Sen. Harry F. Byrd, D., Va., one of the most vocal advocates of government economy, characterized the President's fiscal program as "good." But he said it was "imperative that the budget be balanced" in the fiscal year 1947 which begins next July 1.

Ex-Convict Found Killed In Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 22 — (UP) — The body of Frank Covelli, 39, an ex-convict and former golden gloves boxer, was found slumped over the wheel of his parked automobile last night. He had been shot six times through the head.

The death weapon, a .38 caliber revolver, was found on the floor of the car beside the front seat.

Police said there were no eye-witnesses to the slaying, but James Hayden said he had heard the shots and seen a young man, about six feet tall and wearing a diagonally striped overcoat, hurrying from the scene.

Final Arguments In Durham Trial Today

Conspiracy Trial To Jury Late Today

Fort Wayne, Ind., Jan. 22 — (UP) — The Durham Manufacturing Corp. conspiracy trial may go to the jury late today after final arguments by defense and prosecuting attorneys.

Asst. U. S. District Atty. James E. Keating read excerpts from a congressional code law and a naval handbook yesterday in an effort to prove the company and nine employees guilty of conspiring to defraud the government by concealing defects in war materials.

Keating said that the defendants failed to tell navy inspectors that some propeller shafts, rocket bombs and shells made at Durham were not of the dimensions required by navy specifications.

Referring to the defendants who were transferred from the Muncie, Ind., plant of Durham to Fort Wayne, and two defendants who had served prison terms at Michigan City, Ind., Keating said:

"The conspirators moved in from Muncie, virtually en masse, or they came down from the penitentiary at Michigan City and took over the plant."

"In 29 short months they undertook to substitute their judgment, to push aside the safety factor, and to add extra hazards to the men in our armed forces in order to get the stuff through and pour that $14,000,000 into the pockets of the treasurer of the Durham Corp."

Phil McNagney, attorney for the corporation, told the court that there was "no agreement" between the defendants and "no proof of conspiracy."

"The only proof is founded on suspicion," McNagney said, adding that the men brought to Fort Wayne from Muncie were moved because of their experience.

Charging that the government was a "self-appointed uninvited champion of the navy," the defense attorney said that the navy had not taken either side in the trial. Navy inspectors, he said, knew of and condoned the practices mentioned.

McNagney challenged the government counsel to stop "palying a game of hide and seek" with the jury and ask their experts what harm the practices charged did to Durham's products.

Special Program At High School Today

Youth Pleads Guilty To Woman's Murder

Young War Veteran Confesses Murder

Virginia, Ill., Jan. 22 — (UP) — Ivan De Silva, 21-year-old veteran of the European campaign and a hero-worshiper of the notorious John Dillinger 10 years ago, today faced trial for the murder of a woman in a Broadstown hotel room.

Lucille Rife, 30, of Beardstown, was his victim. She was found strangled with one of her own stockings, laying across a bed over which De Silva had scrawled with her lipstick:

"I killed her when I was drunk."

Local police officials recalled De Silva as "a tough little guy" when he was only 11 years old. At the time he was arrested for breaking into the Beardstown Post Office. He told authorities that the prison-breaking bank-robbing Dillinger was his hero.

In court, the tiny toughie was asked by the judge about a revolver that he was carrying. "What would you do if someone resisted your attempt to rob him," the boy was asked.

"Why, I'd shoot him," the youth was recalled as answering.

State's Attorney Glen Colburn said De Silva's record showed that he served five years at the St. Charles Training School, and broke parole three times.

"We had a lot of trouble with him in those days," Colburn said. "We also had him charged with breaking into the Beard school and stealing articles."

De Silva, who pleaded guilty yesterday when arraigned, was calm in his Cass County jail cell where he will be held without bond until the Circuit Court Grand Jury meets March 18. He and his only question was how showed no remorse, Colburn said, soon he could be tried "and get it over with."

The veteran registered at Beardstown's Park hotel with the woman early Monday morning and at dawn, called police from a relative's home.

"Go to room 14. I have just killed a woman," he told them.

Police traced the call, and within a few minutes arrested De Silva. He confessed killing Miss Rife "while I was drunk."

"The woman had been beaten about the head before being strangled," police said, and was so bruised that immediate identification was difficult.
