Artery Is Severed In Fall Against Window

Roman Raudenbush, 33, 148½ North Second street, was treated at the Adams county memorial hospital for a laceration received when he accidentally forced his arm through a window at 2 o'clock this morning.

An artery in his right arm was severed when he fell against the window in the upstairs apartment. Police were summoned to take him to the hospital, but the injured man was taken there by a passing motorist before they arrived.

He had lost considerable blood and was unconscious upon arrival at the hospital where the wound was sutured. The quantity of the blood on the pavement in downtown Decatur, where he waited for the hospital trip, attracted considerable attention among early arrivals this morning. He was released after treatment and is able to be up and around today.

school teachers."

"Your government is giving financial aid to highway systems and other things considered national in scope—why not education," he said.

The former governor of Indiana pointed to the fact that approximately 1/10 of our children are not in school today because there are not enough school teachers to fill the classrooms. He said that this alarming fact is true because the teaching profession does not pay enough to entice young people to educate themselves for this profession.

A Blackford county farmer himself, Mr. Townsend asserted that American agriculture is in a good position at the present time.

"It is important that the voters elect a senator who is familiar with their problems and has an agricultural background," he said.

Mr. Townsend pointed out that "the problems relating to farm labor, farm parity, rural health, rural housing, marketing agreements, price supports, price regulations, and taxes are all of vital importance to every farm voter."

He showed that farmers are now assured of floors under their farm prices, and that this assurance will hold for at least two years under the present government agreement. He pointed out that the senator elected on November 5, will be in office for a six-year term and will therefore have a great hand in guiding the destinies of the farm population. He asserted that it is important that a farmer be placed in the senate—a man who will be in a position to assist in steering committees on matters pertaining to agriculture.

Now, ladies and gentlemen, believe it or not, one of the main reasons why I'm your candidate, is because I'd like to help. I'd like to have the opportunity to vote for world peace and if I could cast the deciding vote for world peace, I'd much prefer to do that, than to be president of the United States and the King of England put together, and you would too," he said.

"There is another issue in this campaign, and that's the continuation of prosperity that we are now enjoying. The question is, can we carry the tremendous war debt that we now have and still continue to be prosperous at the same time."

"I have been told that there are two great groups of people in the United States that can assure prosperity, labor and agriculture, but agriculture is the source of the most wealth. You see there are only four places from which we can get new wealth—from the forest, from the ocean, from the mines, and from the top six inches of the earth's surface, and the top six inches of the earth's surface, or agriculture, is greater than the other three combined. You have to have wealth to begin somewhere."

"If you can keep the income of agriculture between 21 and 24 billion dollars, that will assure a national income of above 150 billion dollars, because going back over 75 years (any year except in war years) you multiply the agricultural income by seven or 7.3 and that will be within five or six percent of the national income."

He asserted that labor can benefit in many ways from a prosperous agriculture. He stated that 75 percent of all the products raised on the farm are consumed by the laboring people or the great middle class in the city. In continuing, he pointed out that approximately 50 percent of all the products manufactured in the city are consumed by the farming population.

"This year was the first time I ever planted corn and knew the day I was planting it that I wouldn't get less than a certain amount for it. I knew that I wouldn't get less than 90 percent of parity, and parity on corn, in a week or two ago, was $1.23, so the floor under corn is about $1.10.

"I knew I wouldn't get less than that, and I knew when I planted my soybeans that I wouldn't get less than $2.04 for them. That was an arbitrary floor under soybeans."

"Ladies and gentlemen, that is security. And security not only to agriculture but security to the general welfare."

"The laboring man interested in these floors under farm prices? Why sure he is. The laboring man who understands economics of this country, knows that if the farmer gets fair prices he will buy and help keep factories operating," he said.

In closing, Mr. Townsend asked that every voter keep in mind maintaining a high national farm income in order to maintain a national income at a high level in order to continue prosperity in a free and enterprising America. He also asked for a just and everlasting peace instead of war and strife.

Howard Atcheson, Scottsburg, prominent Republican and Scott county farmer, spoke in behalf of Mr. Townsend's candidacy. He was representing the independent farmers Townsend for senator committee, an organization of independent and Republican farmers who are supporting the election of Indiana's former governor.
