Three Boys Confess Setting Costly Fire

$150,000 Fire In Decatur, Illinois

Decatur, Ill., July 10.—(UP)—Delinquency petitions were to be filed today against three small boys who, police said, admitted that they set a $150,000 fire which destroyed the United States Manufacturing Co. warehouse last night.

According to assistant state's attorney Perley Lupton, an eight-year-old negro boy and two 10-year-old white boys said they set the building afire because they "wanted to see it burn."

Richard Shures, an employee of the Decatur Soy Products Co., turned in the first alarm on the fire at 2:30 p.m. He called police and told them he saw the negro boy thrust a blazing broom into a crack between two double doors in the warehouse.

Police hunted the boys while firemen fought the fire. All off-duty firemen were called to the scene before the fire was brought under control.

Authorities said the corrugated steel building and all its contents—packing cases, wooden handles and fly swatters—were a total loss. The building was valued at $50,000 and its contents at $100,000.

Police found the negro boy about 3 p.m. He led them to the other boys.

The building, located in the Decatur manufacturing district, was the firm's main warehouse. The blaze threatened several other buildings in the vicinity.

Two Persons Unhurt As Train Hits Auto

Two persons escaped injury Tuesday night about 10:15 o'clock when their car was struck by a freight engine at the Adams street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad, police chief Ed Miller reported this morning.

Roy L. Collins, 51, and his wife, of Willshire, O., were riding in the vehicle. Officer Robert Hill, who investigated, stated in his report that the flasher lights, recently installed at the crossing, were not working.

Damage to the car was estimated at $500. The engineer of the train was G. W. Athelman, Fort Wayne and the conductor, M. C. Jackson, Decatur.

Fish Bites Woman!

Willie Wells was coming home from Seward's Creek the other evening with a string of trout, when a stern looking lady (visitor at the Boxwood Inn) stops him, and tells him a man his size could be better occupied than catching fish.

Willie tells her off real good-naturedly by saying: "Perhaps you're right, but if these fish had kept their mouths shut, they wouldn't be here." (At that, says Willie, laughing out loud, she looked just as if a fish had bit her!)

Blabbing mouths never cause

anything but trouble. Nobody who knew the facts would ever criticize Willie's right to go fishing on his one day off—any more than they'd deny his right to come home to a mellow glass of beer.

From where I sit, the slower we are to criticize—and the quicker we are to recognize another's tastes, the better we'll get along together—whether those tastes apply to beer or fishing.

Grain and Hay Build Milk Volume

Sometime in the next few weeks, probably the condition of native pastures will be such that your cows are going to have to put a bridle on their appetites, since they'll have a tough time getting a bit in their mouths—bit of food, that is.

If that happens, you surely can't hold your milk production high unless you give the cows a good ration of supplementary feed, grain or hay or both. As I said a few weeks ago, cows on pasture need from 100 to 150 pounds of grass daily to maintain milk production and keep them in good health. Pastures have to be good to provide that much.

In the late summer, grass grows more slowly than it does in the spring and the feed value is lower. The good dairyman, looks to a balanced ration, to make sure that his cows stay fat and his pocketbook fatter.

Boarder cows will not be worth the cost of extra feed. Guess you can say that boarder cows are not worth their keep anyway, which is another subject. But good cows—cows producing a pound or more of butterfat every day—will pay you back in more milk. The extension services have proved that feeding good cows supplement while the animals are on grass, brings back more dollars in milk than the feed costs.

The Minnesota Extension Service has a table of recommended feeding which is usable anywhere. It tells you how many pounds of grain or how many pounds of high quality hay to feed your cows, based on the breed and the daily production of each cow.

It's something well worth studying and I suggest you write the Extension Service, University Farm, St. Paul, Minn., and ask for a copy of Bulletin No. 218. Send a nickel if you live in some other state.

COWS NEED HELP SWATTING FLIES!

You can get up and chase a bothersome fly around the room but a cow has a bit more trouble using its fly swatter which, as you have no doubt noticed, is pretty well fixed on the rear.

And fighting flies must be mighty discouraging work for cows. They stamp their feet, swing their heads and switch their tails endlessly through fly time and probably never kill a dog-gone fly.

But it isn't pity alone that should make us humans concerned about flies on cows. Fighting them, cows use up energy from food that might better go to make milk.

Tennessee Extension made some tests which showed that when cows didn't have to fight flies, milk production went up from 5% to 15%.

Best treatment for insect control is to get rid of breeding places, of course. Removing manure piles, straw piles and other places where flies breed, will help cut down the pesky population. Also, using DDT in wettable powder form, spraying inside the barn and on the animals, will make a big difference.

Follow directions on the package of powder and repeat sprays every two or three weeks during fly time. Talk to your dairy plant fieldman or county agent on the subject. They have the latest information.

HIGH PROTEIN IN LEGUME SILAGE

Extension service people tell us that legume silage is a mighty good way to store up high protein feed for your cows.

You can lose a considerable part of the protein in hay if weather conditions are not too favorable at cutting and storing time. I suggest you give a lot of consideration to making silage out of at least one hay cutting this year. It's good insurance for winter.

Grass or legume silage can be put in your regular silo or you can build a temporary silo—slat or welded wire fence, trench, box, native lumber or whatever you want. Among preservatives available this year are molasses, corn and cob meal and dried cheese whey.

Reports coming in here show that more and more dairymen throughout the country are turning to emergency silos and grass and legume silage. It is cutting milk production costs, helping raise production per cow by providing more protein feed simply, cheaply.
