Decatur is beginning to take on a fair look.

How many more records can be set by the price of this or that?

The harvesting of abundant crops brings prosperity to the nation.

As for frequent reports that the world is at a turning point, all we have to say is: "Turn on, old world—it brings the sunrise."

It may be true that automobile production is too slow, but out on the street it looks as though new planets will be needed to take many more of 'em.

This Wallace convention should not excite the country. If Wallace wants to deal with Stalin, there is a place where he can do this, but he shouldn't be able to do it in America.

To make these party bolts complete, a wing of the Republican party could be organized under Senator Taft and a youth movement set up with Stassen as the standard bearer. Then we could have parties of the "I want ins" and "I am against everything" or "Let George do it."

After a tour of the United States, a prominent European was being interviewed on his impressions. He had seen our skyscrapers, inspected our giant factories, and visited our natural wonders. But when the reporters asked what had impressed him most, he replied simply, "The size of the American garbage can."

Sufferers from hay fever hope to launch a nation-wide movement against the ragweed, chief cause for the sneezes. It should be a popular campaign. No community should be infested with weeds and if the drive gets underway, results should be forthcoming. In the meantime, sufferers seek the colder climates in Michigan and other states, until after frost time. Let's wage war on weeds in our city.

Inflammation of the Larynx

By Herman N. Bundesen, M. D.
THE body is "wired for sound" by means of a complicated and delicate little chamber called the larynx and located at the upper end of the windpipe or trachea. Thus, to singers, actors, and public speakers this little voice-box is likely to assume an importance out of all proportion to its size, and to become the most cherished organ of the body. And there is good reason for the pampering it receives because the voice can be damaged or even lost altogether by any one of a number of things which cause strain or inflammation of the larynx.

Mere overuse of the voice can cause harmful irritation of the organ which produces it, leading to unwelcome changes in the voice itself. Infections or overindulgence in alcohol also damage this delicate little instrument, thus bringing about hoarseness or giving a raspy quality to the voice. Stage fright, as is well known, often causes complete though temporary loss of the voice.

Acute inflammation of the larynx always calls for complete rest of the throat. If a speaking or singing engagement is impending, it should be canceled while the performer stays at home to treat his throat by cold compresses on the neck and the breathing in of steam.

In less severe cases of inflammation of the larynx, it is suggested that some alkaline spray be used in the nose and that a few drops of ephedrine be applied to the voice-box by means of a syringe.

An actor or singer occasionally may lose his voice on the day of an important appearance because of fatigue. Treatment in such cases should include rest in bed,

A person doesn't mind working for money, but winning $7,300 in a jack-pot radio quiz show is something different. Flooded with telephone and well-wishers who wanted to get their hands on the windfall, the young couple who won the prize got so disgusted they were first inclined to decline acceptance of the prize. Even if the story isn't true, it made good reading.

The silliest pronouncement comes from Dewey's campaign manager, Herbert Brownell, Jr., that the special session of congress can't enact the laws requested by President Truman, because they are promises to be carried out under a Republican president. That philosophy parallels the sales technique of the merchant who wouldn't sell his fireworks on the third, because his supply would be exhausted on July Fourth.

A local citizen remarked, "Why do I need a car. A person can't cross Monroe street anyway." Traffic on the above street, which is a state route for highway 33, is incessant. It carries the bulk of local traffic between east and west points, for it is the only through street in those directions. It is very difficult to make north and south crossings over Monroe street, because of the traffic and also because cars are parked too near the crossings. Our streets are burdened with an unusual flow of travel and it appears that the situation calls for some expert advice. What will be the local traffic situation in just another five years?

Hot Weather Stuff:

A year and a half ago in Purley, in Surrey, England, Mrs. Elaine Jefferies bought some turkey eggs, and set them. One of them hatched. People who thought about it at all supposed that the turkey had been raised, fattened and slain to make a winter holiday. But not so.

Recently Mrs. Jefferies was seen leading a fine plump turkey on a leash through the streets. Asked about it, she explained:

"We just couldn't bear to kill Lesley. She lives in the house, sleeps on the sofa and at Christmas we gave her the seat of honor at the table."

The so-called silly season usually begins a little later than this. It's that let-down time of late summer when anything can happen and something ridiculous usually does.

THE SUMMONS

Modern Etiquette

By ROBERTA LEE

Q. Is it necessary that a bride write lengthy letters when acknowledging her wedding gifts?

A. These acknowledgments can be notes, not long letters. It is not the length of the acknowledgment, but the genuine appreciation and sincerity expressed that is important.

Q. How is asparagus eaten?

A. Authorities generally agree that it is best to cut the stalks in half with the fork and eat the tips as one eats any fork food.

Q. Is it correct to have nicknames of men or women on visiting cards?

A. Never.

Mildewed Linens
For badly mildewed linens, use a solution of four tablespoons of peroxide to one quart of water. Use enough of the water to cover the garment and boil for an hour, or until the stains are gone.

Sliding Rugs
Prevent the sliding of your small throw rugs by attaching several jar rubbers to the under side or by shellacking the reverse side.

Red Ants
To get rid of red ants try using boiling water and borax. It kills them instantly.

Hoosiers Enroute To Wallace Convention

Indianapolis, July 22 — (UP) — Indiana's 104-member delegation of Henry Wallace's progress party today was en route to Philadelphia for tomorrow evening's opening session of the party's national founding convention.

The delegation will hold 26 votes in the convention — twice the number of its electoral vote.

The Hoosier delegation was headed by Walter Frisbie, progressive candidate for governor of Indiana.

Man Electrocuted Picking Apricots

Ligonier, Ind., July 22 — (UP) — Fred Bowen, 38, Ligonier, was fatally electrocuted while he and Everett Calbeck were picking apricots late yesterday, state police reported today.

Police said Calbeck was moving an aluminum step ladder when it touched a power line, electrocuting him. Bowen was standing in a puddle of water and suffered the fatal shock when he attempted to aid Calbeck.

Calbeck was not seriously injured, police said.

SYNOPSIS
Anne Forester had become engaged to Lieutenant Commander Alec Doremus following a whirlwind courtship in Hawaii over a year ago. Recently he had called her from the Far East to be ready to marry him soon at Stone House, his family's estate in Jersey. Julia, his mother, was overjoyed when Anne accepted her invitation to stay with them. Her departure from New York was a blow to cynical Donald Ordes, who had long been in love with her. Stone House had been in the Doremus family for generations and the beauty of its acres of model farmlands thrilled Anne as John, Alec's serious-minded older brother, explained all it meant to him. Besides John, his wife, Helen and Judy, their small daughter, the household consisted of Alec's parents, Julia and Henry Doremus; Henry's mother, "Gram" Doremus; and Julia's mother, Madame Kingsley. It was soon evident to Anne that Helen's only interest was her business career in a New York publishing house, and sympathy for John surged through her at the realization his marriage was not a happy one. As the weeks passed a bond of understanding based on their mutual love of Stone House formed between them.

on, after a moment, "there's the beauty of the place. That means a great deal to me, too. I love each season so much that I think each one is the best. And there's also the thing you spoke of when you first saw Stone House. The sense of permanence. What I cherish here, what I plant and nurse and cherish, will live for generations. Perhaps," he paused—"perhaps it's the only immortality God intends for man. I don't know."

"Yes," she said again. But he seemed to have forgotten her. He seemed to be talking to himself now.

"Finally—and this is probably the most important thing—here we have a way of life that is simple and wholesome and—kind. None of us, I mean, has to step on the neck of anyone else to get ahead. We're not in competition. We're in harmony. All of us working for the good of all, without envy and without strife. The goal isn't money. It's just—good living. And that's Christian." He checked himself and looked down at her. "I didn't mean to preach a sermon," he said. "What you really wanted to know was whether this is paying me financially."

"I wanted the whole picture. Just as you're giving it to me," she told him quickly.

He looked away again. "This is the rest, then. It isn't paying me yet. I had to borrow from the bank to get started. The war held me up, too. It was impossible to get ahead as fast as I planned. But I'm breaking even. I've found other sources of income that I hadn't expected to find—lecturing—writing, and in another year or so I should see profits." His eyes came back to her. "When I do, the men in my employ will share in the profits, each according to his worth," he finished quietly.

There it was. All of it. Much more than a way of living. Much more than a dream. A reality. A high adventure.

They had been late getting back to the house. They went in through the kitchen where Anne glimpsed warm red bricks, shining copper, and flames leaping in the wide Dutch fireplace. There were two small low rockers before the fire, and a round table with a red and white checked cloth in a corner, and geraniums on the broad window sill beneath red and white checked gingham curtains. It was a wonderful kitchen, really, she thought, combining in its spaciousness the comfortable and homely old with the clean and efficient new.

Breakfast was over by the time they sat down and Helen had long since departed for New York. Madame Kingsley had her breakfast

Chef's Potato Salad
Broadcast: July 24, 1946
1 1/2 cups finely cut onion
3 tablespoons meat drippings
2 tablespoons flour
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 1/4 teaspoons salt
1/2 cup vinegar
2 tablespoons water
1/2 cup fat milk
1 1/2 cups diced meat
1/2 cup diced onion
2 1/2 cups diced potatoes
2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons mayonnaise
2 sliced hard-boiled eggs
Cook onion slowly 5 min. in drippings. Blend in mixture of sugar, dry mustard, salt and pepper. Stir in vinegar and water. Boil 2 min., then stir into meat. Remaining ingredients and mix. Do not chill, but serve at once. Garnish with egg slices, greens and strips of cheese. Makes 4 servings.
