Russia Announces Death Of Litvinov

Former Red Leader Dies In Obscurity

Moscow, Jan. 2.—(UP)—Russian announced today the death of Maxim Litvinov, 75, one of the last surviving collaborators of Nikolai Lenin and chief architect of Soviet cooperation with the west before World War II.

Pravda, the Communist party newspaper and only morning paper published today, said Litvinov died Monday after a long illness.

The body of the "old Bolshevik" lay in state this morning on a flower-bedecked catafalque in the conference hall of the foreign ministry. Four uniformed officers of the foreign ministry stood a guard of honor.

Flowers came from various Soviet organizations and small delegations of workers came to pay their last respects.

Pravda published a half-column obituary of Litvinov on its last page, describing him as "an old Bolshevik" and "a prominent diplomat." The dispatch said he had given up active work in the last few years because of severe illness.

Litvinov had been out of public life since his retirement as a deputy foreign minister in 1946. Before that, he had been foreign commissar from 1929 to 1939 and Soviet ambassador to Washington from 1941 to 1943.

As foreign commissar, Litvinov helped the Bolshevik regime gain diplomatic recognition in the chancelleries of the world, win a seat in the league of nations and generally extend its influence in international affairs.

He also was instrumental in obtaining American recognition for the Soviet government in 1933.

Litvinov, a thickset, sandy-haired man, was born Meer Vallach July 17, 1876, in Russian Poland. He changed his name to Maxim Maximovich Litvinov when he became a revolutionary.

He joined what later became the Communist party in 1898 and three years later was arrested and sent to a Siberian prison. He escaped with nine other revolutionaries after serving only a year and a half and made his way to Switzerland to join Lenin.

When the old Social Democratic party split into Bolshevik and Menshevik wings, he joined the Bolsheviks under Lenin and thereafter was known as one of the "old Bolsheviks."

He became ambassador to Washington Dec. 6, 1941 and remained until Aug. 22, 1943, when Russia was agitating for a second front. Returning to Moscow, he was named a deputy foreign minister. Jacob Malik replaced him in that post Aug. 23, 1946 and he retired from public life.

Nominate Officers For Extension Group

Mrs. Leonard Wagley, August Selking and Delmore Wechter, recently appointed nominating committee for the Adams county extension committee, met Monday in the county extension office.

The slate they prepared was for chairman: Holman Egly and Eryin Schiller; vice-chairman, Henry Rumpke and Menno Augsburgers.

Taylor Choir Will Open Week's Services

The 40-voice choir of Taylor University will give a concert of sacred music for the opening service of spiritual emphasis week Sunday evening. The service will be held in the Zion Reformed church at 7:30 o'clock.

The director of the choir is Prof. Eugene Pearson, a professional baritone for over 15 years in Los Angeles, singing in the Hollywood bowl and with the Los Angeles Philharmonic orchestra. Dr. Pearson joined the Taylor faculty as head of the music department in the fall of 1950.

Presiding at the Sunday evening concert will be the Rev. Samuel Emerick. Devotional leaders will be the Rev. Romaine Wood of the Church of the Nazarene and the Rev. Robert Hammond of the Baptist church. The Rev. William Feller, host pastor, and the Rev. John Chambers of Trinity Evangelical United Brethren, will serve as the welcoming committee. The ushers will be members of the host church.

The public is invited to attend this service. The program follows: Organ Prelude, Mary Lee Wilson. Choral Invocation. Heavenly Light, Kopylow-Wilbousky. Children of the Heavenly Father—Swedish, Pyle. God is the Light of the World.

Haydn Morgan. O Come, Holy Spirit, Bach. A Ballad of the Trees and The Master, H. A. Matthews. A Glorification, F. Meilus Christensen. Open Our Eyes, Macfarlane. Praise the Lord, Rachmaninoff. Rise Up, my love, my Fair one, Healey Willan. Climb Up the Mountain—Spiritual, arr. by Smyth. It's Me, O Lord—Spiritual, Noble Cain. Rocka My Soul!—Spiritual, Noble Cain. Benediction, Pastor. Sevenfold Amen, Peter Lutkin.

Indiana Highways Reported Hazardous

Highways Glazed By Freezing Rain

Indianapolis, Jan. 2.—(UP)—A freezing rain glazed Indiana highways with ice today as rivers went above flood stage at several points in the state.

The mercury dipped below freezing all over the state early today and rain coated everything with ice as it froze when it hit. State police said roads over the northern two-thirds of the state were slick and hazardous.

River observers said the Wabash river was above flood stage and still rising from Lafayette to Vincennes. The west fork of the White river was slightly below flood stage at Spencer and Ellettsburg, four feet over at Edwardsport and rising at all three points.

Temperatures yesterday ranged as high as 67 degrees at Evansville and Indianapolis but skidded quickly when a cold front pushed across the state.

Low readings this morning were 22 degrees at South Bend, 25 at Terre Haute, 26 at Fort Wayne and Indianapolis and 30 at Evansville.

Rain measured only a few hundredths of an inch in most places but Scottsburg reported .41 inch. Shoals, 40, and Evansville, 31.

Weathermen said the rain had turned to light snow at Fort Wayne, but continued freezing on the ground southward. They said the rain probably will end tonight or tomorrow and temperatures will remain cold.

Highs of 25 to 35 degrees were forecast for today and lows of 20 to 30 were tonight's prediction. Weather observers believed that, barring further heavy rain, there would be no major flooding along state streams. The Wabash was six feet above flood stage and rising at Bluffton in its headwaters, and above flood stage at Lafayette, Covington, Montezuma and Terre Haute. Some lowlands were flooded and corn stands damaged. But it was considered a "normal" flooding and weathermen said they weren't alarmed.

In eastern Ontario province, Canada has a Mississippi river as well as a Mississippi lake. Natural gas was first used commercially during the late 1800's in New York state.
