The teachers, those days with perfect weather for their annual convention, which also pleased their pupils.

Party emblems on the national, state and county ballots for the November election are identical. The Republican emblem is an eagle and that of the Democrat's, a rooster. The names of the candidates are listed in their respective party columns. The point is to use your ballot on November 4.

Someone is always taking the joy out of the brisk fall days, knowing that winter is just around the corner. Mindful of what might lie ahead, the Chicago Motor club advises, "Place a shovel and a box of sand, salt, cinders or ashes in your car trunk for use when you get stuck on icy streets, in ruts or at curbsides."

How does Decatur rate with you? An inventory list of civic and public improvements found in the average good community will be published in Saturday's issue of this newspaper. It should be interesting to know how the Home Town rates with citizens. Give this newspaper your checked list and compilation of opinions will be made and published.

The heavy registration of voters in the large cities is indicative of Democrat majorities in Ohio, political writers and columnists explain. With record-breaking registrations in Cleveland, Toledo and other cities, the Democrats have more than an even chance of carrying the Buckeye state again this year. The same condition exists in the Gary area in Indiana, where guesses place the Democrat majority in Lake county at around 35,000.

What does Decatur have, what does Decatur lack in civic spirit and public improvements? A check-list of 40 fundamentals that make-up community life will be published in Saturday's issue of this newspaper. Readers are asked to check the list and give a "yes" or "no" answer to the statements. The list was compiled by Pathfinder magazine and to a great extent includes those improvements and civic features which go to form a good place in which to live. If you'll check the list and send it to this office, a compilation of the answers will be made and the result published.

United Nations Day:—

Today is United Nations Day. The day may be no occasion for wild celebrations, but it is a day for solemn hope, for it marks the birth of promise, a promise that one day this organization may be able to outlaw war.

It is not critical to say that United Nations is imperfect, although it has arrayed almost the entire world against Communist aggressors in Korea. Furthermore, during one of the tensest eras in world history, it has managed to keep nearly all nations discussing their differences rather than waging war over them.

Also, the U. N. has helped the needy all over the world. It has fed the hungry, succored the sick and taught the illiterate. Its children's emergency fund has aided children whose homes were reduced to rubble, whose parents were killed or in concentration camps.

The U. N. has begun, at least, to tackle the gigantic tasks which, if left unattended, would only create new misery and new wars. And what other organization is there that could undertake its functions? The answer is—none. For this reason alone it is important to support the world organization in the hope that some day it may be able to fulfill the dream that greeted its formation seven years ago.

Modern Etiquette

BY ROBERTA LEE

Q. How does a woman introduce her husband?

A. To friends, as "John," and to acquaintances, as "my husband." The two names of safety are "my husband" and "my wife," since they are proper no matter to whom you are talking. In business, "Mr. Johnson" and "Mrs. Johnson" are quite correct.

Q. Is it permissible for a dinner guest to mention any particular preference in foods?

A. No. He should accept what is offered, and not make reference to any other kind of dish he particularly likes.

Q. When one has illness in the family, and a friend says, "I am sorry, etc." what should one's response be?

A. "Thank you" is sufficient.

Public education costs in the United States have increased from $15 per capita in 1870 to the present rate of almost $190 per year.

Fewer Restrictions Being Put On Those With Heart Trouble

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

MANY people with heart trouble can handle a fair amount of freedom in their actions and eating habits. This does not appear to damage the heart, and certainly makes the patient happier and more optimistic.

For many years doctors have set strict rules telling the heart patient what he can and cannot do. In many cases these rules are very good, and should be followed. Often, however, too-strict adherence to rules over-plays their effectiveness. Many times they only add unnecessary distress and discomfort.

Smoking in Moderation

A good example is smoking. Sometimes, persons with any type of heart disease are advised to give up tobacco. However, many physicians agree that over a period of years most people with heart disease can smoke moderately without too much harm.

Recently, a study was made to find out if smoking puts any extra work on the heart. It was found that for many heart patients tobacco smoke causes relatively little change in the heart and blood vessels.

active rheumatic heart disease, smoking should be forbidden.

It has also been shown that walking up stairs easily—very slowly and without trying to rush—is not too great a strain for most heart patients.

For Bed Patients

For the person who has to stay in bed, bed pans often are a special problem. Recently, a study has shown that, as a rule, a patient puts out more effort trying to use a bed pan than using a commode at the bedside.

Usually, a person with heart disease is immediately forbidden any salt in his food. The result is a monotonous diet that is quite discouraging for many people. Unless there is definite heart failure or severe high blood pressure, most of these patients can get along with a moderate amount of salt, and thus enjoy more interesting meals.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

H. H.: What causes the constant ringing in my ear?

Answer: Ringing in the ear is due to a number of causes, such as anemia, kidney disease, accumulation of wax in the ear, as well as an infection in the tube connecting the ear with the mouth. It is advisable to have a physical examination to determine the cause of this condition. Ringing due to inner ear disease has recently been greatly helped by high dosages of vitamin A.

24 States Permit Time Off To Vote

Indiana Included Among 24 States

CHICAGO UP — Voters in 24 states legally can take time off from their jobs to vote, a survey showed today.

The survey was made by commerce clearing house, a private law reporting agency.

Thirteen states require that all workers be paid for such time off. These are Arizona, California, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Texas and West Virginia.

Colorado and Utah require payment only for workers not on an hourly basis.

Other states in which employees can take time off to vote are Alabama, Arkansas, Indiana, Massachusetts, Nevada, Oklahoma, Maryland, New Mexico and Wisconsin.

No state expressly forbids pay for time off to vote, but some make specific provisions.

Voters are required to apply in advance for time off in Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska and Wisconsin, and employers are empowered to set the time.

Seven states permit the employer to specify the time, but do not require application by the voter, including South Dakota.

Employees in Indiana are prohibited from specifying the time-off period, and employees are not required to make application.

Feathers

To remove feathers from wild ducks, dip them into boiling water, and then wrap in a thick cloth. The feathers are steamed loose and the "pins" will give very little or no trouble.

Preserving Flowers

If one wishes to preserve some flowers, dip it entirely into a solution of gum in alcohol. The alcohol evaporates readily, which leaves the gum, and this is almost transparent.

Fudge

A teaspoonful of cornstarch added to the fudge will greatly improve its texture and flavor.

CHAPTER TWENTY-FIVE

THE HARANGUE among the Indians was still going on, the messenger giving the grim details of how men had died at the Spin, because of some of these same white men. Taut with tension, the Indians still listened, but they were like bows strung and ready to loose. In their present mood they would repay what they counted as treachery with more of the same.

There was just one chance. The white men had come unarmed, McQuestion arguing that a show of friendliness and trust was essential. Rawls had had no choice but to obey orders.

One of the chiefs sat close at hand, and he had not been so foolish as to lay aside his weapons. He had a tomahawk in his girdle, and Rawls moved like a pouncing cat. He brandished the axe at the owner's eyes before the others were quite sure what was happening.

"We go back to boat," he grunted in English, using it for the sake of his companions. "Nothing happen to us, nothing happen to you. If we die, you die too!" Quickly he repeated it in Sioux, so that there would be no misunderstanding.

McQuestion was staring, getting to his feet. He had been in plenty of tight places, but the turn which this had taken was the worst he'd ever seen. Watching the newcomer, he had belatedly recognized him as the man with whom he'd talked at the wood lot, making the deal that was to have destroyed the Pride of Kansas and sacrificed the lives of those aboard her.

Now Rawls knew of that treachery, but the fact that he would be a chief target for vengeance was uppermost in his mind. If he lived these next few moments, it would be due to Rawls' McQuestion gestured, and the crew members turned to move with him, Rawls at their rear, the tomahawk menacing the chief.

Momentarily it was working. The other chiefs watched, stunned, well aware of their comrade's peril at a false move. But an Indian didn't think like a white man, as Rawls was aware. The life of another man, a hostage, wouldn't weigh large with them, not for long.

Clouds were building in the west, taking dark shape above the twisted hills, and a cool breath blew down the river. Those on the packets were alert, guns trained on the Indians, visible on shore. But for every red man visible there was a score out of sight but within striking distance, and without turning his head as he walked, Rawls could sense the anger which ran through them, could almost catch

Reds Claim 600,000 U. N. Casualties

Propaganda Aired By Radio Peiping

TOKYO UP — The Communist Radio Peiping claimed today more than 600,000 United Nations soldiers have been killed and wounded since Chinese "volunteers" entered the Korean war two years ago.

The propaganda broadcast was made on the eve of the second anniversary of the Chinese entry into the war.

In driving U. N. troops from the Yalu River to the 38th parallel, the broadcast said, the Communists have killed or wounded 661,034 Allied soldiers.

The radio's total included 291,001 Americans, 348,045 South Koreans, 18,575 Britons, Canadians and Australians and 3,400 soldiers from Turkey, France, Thailand, the Philippines and Greece.

The Communist broadcast claimed 3,804 Allied war planes have been shot down, another 3,519 damaged and 10 captured.

Other claims included 1,537 tanks destroyed and 190 captured, and 3,730 big guns and 69,899 small guns destroyed.

The Reds claimed three naval destroyers, three minesweepers and three landing craft have been sunk in the past two years and two destroyers were damaged.

Francis J. Schmidt vs Fred Ahr and Mary Ahr; complaint on account; motion to make more specific, definite and certain filed.

Cases Continued

George A. Gage et al vs Stewart McMillen; complaint for damages; on motion of defendant case is continued.

John H. Kable vs Mildred Acker; complaint to foreclose mechanics lien; submitted to trial without jury; permission granted to amend.

"Whirlers' orders," Rawls explained. "He says we're going to Pomp's Pillar. He didn't say why."

"Pomp's Pillar?" She was agast. "Isn't that a long way farther upstream?"

"Something over two hundred miles, as I figure it. It may be closer to three."

"And you're taking the boat—taking us all to destruction?" She swung on Earnshaw as he appeared. "What's the meaning of this—this folly? My father owns the Astrid. I demand that both boats be turned back, at once."

"You'll have to talk to Mr. Whirlter. Earnshaw retorted. "He's in command."

"Since when?" Astrid demanded. "My father commands."

"You'd better talk to Mr. Whirlter," was all that Earnshaw would say.
