German Socialist Hits London Accord

Assails Accord On German Rearmament

BONN (INS) — West German Social Democratic leader Erich Ollenhauer blasted the London accord on German rearmament today and cited a new Russian call for four-power talks on Germany as proof of a "basic change in the Soviet attitude."

Opening the West German parliamentary foreign affairs debate on the London conference, Ollenhauer declared:

"German divisions will be of no value or importance as they will not be established for another three years."

"Our highest aim should be the unanimous approval of a policy of relaxation of tensions."

He called for a "reappraisal" of German foreign policy as forged by Chancellor Konrad Adenauer which is aimed at tying the Bonn republic firmly to the western collective defense system in Europe.

Adenauer has been accused by the Socialists and some members of his own coalition of sacrificing the cause of German reunification in his determination to bind the new Germany to the democratic west.

Ollenhauer said:

"The danger of a third world war is now considerably less than four years ago when the chancellor began his integration policy."

He listed the end of the Korean and Indo-Chinese wars as well as Soviet foreign minister V. M. Molotov's proposal for new talks on German unification — and neutralization — as proof on the "new" Russian approach.
