Democrats Hope To Control Assembly

Hopeful Of Reverse In G.O.P. Control

INDIANAPOLIS (UP) — Indiana Democrats would consider it a nifty trick if they could reverse the scoreboard and grab control of the 1957 general assembly in the Nov. 6 election.

Some Democrats at least claim it can be done. The Republicans say it can't.

Democrats haven't controlled either house since 1949, and in the 1955 legislature the 150 lawmakers were divided 99-51 in favor of the GOP.

Hoosiers will elect all 100 members of the house — each good for two years.

Of the 24 holdover senators, 13 are Republicans and 11 Democrats.

State Democratic chairman Charles Skillen said reports from throughout Indiana indicate his party not only will win seats away from the GOP but will take over the majority in both houses.

The 1955 lineup in the house was 63-37 in the GOP's favor. In the senate it was 36-14.

Asked privately if Democrats wouldn't have a tough time electing enough lawmakers to win control, Skillen snapped, "Well, we're going to elect them."

Republican leaders concede privately there will be inroads in the GOP majority, but they won't buy the idea that Democrats will win the majority.

The majority party not only can control legislation if it votes in a bloc, but it gains the chairmanship of important committees where the fate of most bills is decided.

Ordinarily, half of the senate — 25 seats — are filled every two years. This year 26 will be filled because of the resignation of a holdover senator — Milford E. Anness (R-Liberty).

A tabulation by the Indiana State Federation of Labor showed 34 attorneys among those seeking election to the 126 seats. It also listed 26 farmers, about 15 businessmen and merchants, "one-half dozen manufacturers, a number of professional people, six or seven in the teaching and educational field, and 10 workers."

Most of the candidates in both houses are incumbents or former lawmakers.

Among the holdover senators are the top party leaders of the 1955 session — senate president pro tem John Van Ness, Valparaiso, and Democratic minority leader Warren Martin, Clarksville.

The GOP speaker of the house, George Diener, Indianapolis, is up for reelection. So is the Democratic house minority leader, Walter Maehling, Terre Haute.

Presiding over the senate will be the new lieutenant governor — either Republican Crawford Parker or Democrat Bartel Zandstra.

Marion county, the most populous county, has the biggest representation in the legislature. It has 11 representatives, shares a 12th with Johnson county, four senators and shares a fifth with Johnson county.

Lake, second most populous, is next with three senators, five representatives and a sixth it shares with Porter county.

Senators seeking reelection include Republican Roy Conrad, Monticello, majority conference chairman in 1955 and Governor Craig's "right-hand man," and Democrat Eugene Bainbridge, Munster, minority conference chairman.

John R. Feighner (R-Marion), house majority floor leader, is not seeking reelection. But Rep. Philip C. Johnson (R-Mooresville), house majority caucus chairman, and Rep. James S. Hunter (D-East Chicago), minority caucus chairman, are running again.

Parching Dry Spell Continues In State

No Hope Of Rainfall For Parched Indiana

By UNITED PRESS

Eighty-plus temperatures and a parching dry spell haunted Hoosiers today. There was no hope for an end to either before the week-end. Even then little rain will fall.

Temperatures ranged from 81 at Lafayette to 84 at South Bend at peak points Tuesday, approaching all-time highs for Oct. 16.

The mercury was due to hit 83 from north to south this afternoon and about the same Thursday.

"Sunny and warm" was the cryptic forecast.

The five-day outlook called for temperatures averaging 3 to 5 degrees above normal Thursday through next Monday. Normal maximums are 65° to 71° and normal minimums 43° to 48° for this time of year.

"Warm through Friday, turning cooler about Saturday," the weatherman said.

Regarding precipitation, his outlook again was gloomy.

"Precipitation will average less than one-tenth inch with a few scattered showers likely about Friday and again Sunday night or Monday," the outlook said.

Lafayette had a 43 this morning for the lowest reading around the state. Elsewhere, low marks ranged up to 56 at Indianapolis. Tonight's lows will range from 50 in the south to 54 in the north, the forecast said.
