Report Two Breakins Here Over Holiday

Two breakins were reported to local authorities over the New Year holiday. The first was discovered Monday at Adams Central high school.

Apparently nothing was taken in the school breakin, but the doors to the principal's office and the shop were forced open and the rooms were rifled. The sheriff's department is conducting an investigation.

The other breakin occurred sometime Tuesday morning at Mies bowling alley. This was the second breakin at the bowling alley in several days. The entry was made through a basement window and the door to the storage room was forced open. Two cases of beer were taken. The breakin was reported to city police by John Hoffman, who discovered it at 8:50 a.m. Tuesday.

Declares Russia To Continue Buildup

To Strengthen While Arm Race Continues

MOSCOW (UP) — Communist Party leader Nikita S. Khrushchev told a New Year's Eve reception that Russians were still "Stalinists" in the fight against imperialism and that Russia will strengthen its army as long as the western arms race continues.

Diplomats who attended the reception reported today that the 600 persons present applauded loudly when Khrushchev, leader of the de-Stalinization campaign, praised the former premier for fighting "against our class enemies."

Khrushchev also said Russia will build up its armed forces as long as the capitalist countries are "feverishly" building up their own military forces, the diplomats said.

Khrushchev ranged over ideological questions and the international situation. He said Russia alone halted the war in the Mideast and he said "we cannot forget that a number of capitalist countries are conducting a feverish arms race."

"Therefore," he said, "we must not for a single second forget our army. We must supply it with first class techniques and equipment. We did this, are doing this and will do this because we desire to preserve and strengthen peace, because we must defend the conquest of the great October revolution — Soviet power."

Western diplomats, led by the United States, Britain and France, boycotted the reception in protest against Soviet intervention in Hungary.

Appellate Judges To Take Office Thursday

Next In Series Of State Inaugurations

INDIANAPOLIS (UP) — Two Appellate Court judges take office for four-year terms Thursday as a series of inaugurations resulting from the Nov. 6 Indiana election continues.

Dewey Kelley of Whiting begins his second term and James C. Cooper of Rushville will be sworn in for his first term. They were among the 13 Statehouse officials swept into office by the Republican landslide.

Highlight of the series of inaugurations comes Jan. 14 when Gov.-elect Harold Handley takes the oath as Indiana's chief executive. Handley won the right to succeed GOP Gov. George N. Craig by defeating Democrat Ralph Tucker.

Cooper, state public defender the past eight years, served four terms as Rush County prosecuting attorney. He has been a GOP precinct committeeman and active in party affairs more than 30 years.

A native of Indianapolis, Cooper received law degrees from the Benjamin Harrison Law School and Indiana University. He has been a practicing attorney since 1927.

Cooper will be formally admitted to the court and sworn in by Floyd Draper, Gary, former Supreme Court judge. The ceremony will be held in the Appellate Court chamber.

Kelley, following Appellate Court custom, will not take part in the formal inauguration, since he is an incumbent.

A native of Memphis, Ind., Kelley began his law career in Richmond and practiced in Whiting for 29 years. For five years he was judge of Whiting City Court.

Kelley, a World War I Navy veteran, was elected to the Appellate Court in 1952. Cooper succeeds retiring Judge John A. Kendall, Danville, from the court's first district. Kelley holds one of the second district seats on the six-man court.

The terms of the four other judges expire in January, 1959. Three incumbent members of the Supreme Court will be sworn in Jan. 7.
