Leopold Awaiting Action On Appeal

Noted Persons Come To Aid Of Leopold

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — A suspenseful wait began yesterday for Nathan Leopold, 32, seeking his freedom on the ground that he is a humble convict who has atoned for the 1924 thrill slaying of little Bobby Franks.

Leopold, who has been in Stateville Prison for 33 years, appealed Tuesday to the Illinois Parole and Pardon Board for commutation of his 85-year term. Gov. William G. Stratton is expected to rule on the appeal "in about 30 days."

Among those supporting Leopold's plea were poet Carl Sandburg, mystery author Erle Stanley Gardner, novelist Meyer Levin, and several of Leopold's former University of Chicago classmates. No one appeared to oppose Leopold's freedom bid.

Leopold did not attend the clemency hearing, but in a written appeal he asked to be allowed to do outside of prison walls.

"I earnestly beg you to show me the mercy I did not show," his petition read.

Fell into a Pit!

"I beg you to permit me to spend my few remaining years in the free world and give me a chance to try to be useful and to justify my experience. I leave my fate in your hands and in the hands of God."

A former classmate, Abel M. Brown, now a Chicago real estate man, told the board:

"As a lonely kid, he (Leopold) fell into a pit as black as life can make it. He's crying out now at the very end of his life for help. If you don't help him, you'll cut off his heart. He'll rot and die in prison."

Leopold and his partner in crime, Richard Loeb, murdered the 14-year-old Franks boy in a thrill killing that shocked the nation. Leopold was sentenced to 65 years, but former Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson reduced the sentence to 85 years in recognition of Leopold's service in malaria experiments.

Loeb died in a prison fight in 1936.

Poet Asks Mercy

The parole board previously turned down three parole bids by Leopold and set 1965 as the next time he could apply for parole. However, Leopold said he feared he won't live that long. He has had two heart attacks and suffers from diabetes and a kidney infection.

Sandburg and Gardner appealed on Leopold's behalf in letters to Stratton. Sandburg asked the governor for "an act of mercy and justice" which would be the "gong of a great moment to be never forgotten in the record and annals of Illinois and the U.S.A."

Gardner's letter said Leopold's release could aid "in stemming the tide of juvenile delinquency," but he did not elaborate.

Levin, author of the best-selling novel, "Compulsion," based on the crime, said Leopold, who "has become a symbol of crime, can become a greater symbol of correction."

Extradition Doubtful For Indicted Couple

U.S. Is Unlikely To Request Extradition

PARIS (UPI)—A French government official said today that France would not extradite a former American Army officer and his wife accused of spying for Russia unless the United States can prove they were criminals.

The couple is Russian-born George Zlatovski, 47, a former U.S. Army intelligence officer, and his wife, Jane Foster, 45, who have lived in Paris since 1949.

They were indicted earlier this week by a New York federal grand jury on charges of espionage for the Soviet Union.

But it seemed more and more doubtful they ever would be sent back to New York to face trial.

The U.S. government thus far has not made any formal request for extradition of the pair. Reliable sources here said the French government has politely but firmly turned down several unofficial requests for extradition, insisting a formal request is necessary.

But there was some doubt whether Washington ever would make a formal request. This was because the United States virtually would have to try its case against the Zlatovskis in a French court, and it is highly reluctant to divulge its evidence abroad.

The biggest problem the Americans face in the chess game that has developed in the legal fight to send the Zlatovskis to trial is that espionage often is viewed as a political and not a criminal affair.

France will not extradite anyone on political charges. This has been a longstanding French tradition, in effect since the revolution. It is frankly, but unhappily, recognized by the United States as a fact of life here.

Beverage Board Meets Tuesday

Paul Gibbons, of Anderson, appointed as the new district state representative of the state alcoholic beverage board, attended a meeting of the local board, held in the commissioner's room of the county court house Tuesday.

Gibbons replaces Ora Raines. The three local board members of the organization include Boyd Rayer, John Blakley and Curtis Hill.

Happ's Place in Berne was granted a renewal of its beer and wine license, and the Herman Colchin liquor store was granted a license renewal for package liquor and carry-outs.

Four Scholarships In Forestry Offered

Indiana high school graduates who have an interest in forestry and have completed at least three years of 4-H work are eligible to compete for four $1600 college scholarships, W. R. Amick, associate 4-H leader at Purdue University, has announced. The scholarships will be applied to undergraduate work in forestry. Interested youths should contact Amick or their county extension agent.

Offered for the first time, the scholarships are intended to help qualified 4-H members through four years of study. Award winners may enroll in any accredited college or university. Other than maintaining satisfactory scholastic progress, the only stipulation is that the student carry a major or minor in forestry. Winners will be announced at the national 4-H club congress in Chicago next December. The sum will be paid at the rate of $4
