

Early County History Is Detailed In Letter

Much early history of French and Hartford townships was contained in a letter received recently by Bryce Thomas, president of the Adams county historical society, from Miss Nancy Mae Reynolds, a school teacher now located near Wheeling, W. Va.

The letter follows: "Dear Mr. Thomas: I noticed by the Berne Witness that you are organizing an Adams county historical society in which I am very much interested—because my mother's great-grandfather, Joseph French, for whom the township was named according to the early historical records of Adams county in the Decatur library, was the first white settler of the southern part of French township along the Wabash river.

"According to family history Joseph French came to that area before 1827 and bought almost all the land from the Wells county line to Linn Grove along the Wabash river from the government." (As was customary in those days, Joseph French, according to records in the county recorder's office, did not enter his land at the federal land office until 1835-38, during which time he entered nearly 1,000 acres.)

"While he was building a log cabin he slept in a hollow log to protect himself against bears and other wild animals. My mother, who is 85 years old and lives on road 116 in French township, tells me that after he had his house completed he rode horseback back to Madison county, New York, and brought almost all his children and their families along with some other families such as the Morrises of Bluffton, Haughtons, Sheldons, and Dunbars, to live in that area.

"One of these daughters was the mother of L. L. Dunbar (deceased) for whom the Dunbar factory was named.

"I do not know the exact date that they came to Adams county—but if you are interested you could find it in the records of Adams county when the land west of the Wabash river was purchased from the government.

"I do know that the French family lived there before 1827 because I have an old newspaper, 'The Madison Observer' (N. Y.) which published a list of unclaimed letters and one letter was for George French, who was living here with his family in French township at that time.

"George French was the ancestor of many of the Runyons—however, one of his brothers or nephews was the ancestor of Mrs. Verl Mesberger, owner of the Mesberger stone quarries.

"An interesting item in this newspaper is the death of Adams and Jefferson.

"Another unusual event which occurred was the birth of the first white child—a Mrs. Hall, mother of Chester Hall (deceased) of Hartford township when the Wabash river flooded their house. She was born in a boat in the old orchard of our home farm. Mrs. Chester Hall, of Hartford township, may give you 'leads' on this.

"Near that farm is the oldest cemetery in French township where all these early settlers are buried.

"Mrs. Ervin Lochner and some DAR ladies from New Haven came to check 'markers' in the cemetery in late August. This cemetery has markers dated 1842 and some unmarked graves which were buried earlier. This cemetery has been used but once since 1900.

"This cemetery was deeded to French township. The only care it gets is a meager amount from the township.

"I noticed in one of the old histories of Adams county in the Decatur library about 25 years ago where the first French township election was conducted at the homes of my great uncles and cousins. I asked my mother about it, and she says it was at the Elroy Stauffer and Frank Myers (Risley farm) in French township. I believe that history was written by a Snow at Geneva—because he was one of the early educators and pioneers.

"My mother tells me that her older brothers, who would be over 100 years old, used to carry the mail to Murray and in the winter they carried it by skating on the Wabash river from Linn Grove.

"My mother's father was the first Linn Grove postmaster—but the post office was known as Buena Vista and it was located on the farm in the house where I & M electric substation on the road 118 near Linn Grove is now.

"Some years later another French, who was of no kin to Joseph French; a few Swiss French families which included the Michauds of Berne, Schafers, Merritts and others; and some Virginians such as the Reynolds families and Brickers settled in that area.

"Minerva Shoemaker, about 10 years ago the oldest person in the southern part of the county, and mother of Mrs. Farlow of Geneva, was the last surviving granddaughter of Joseph French. The Farlows may have some historical records.

"One day there was an old mill race, quarries in the river, and I'm told an old Indian burial place near the island in the river on the Tonner farm—owned in early days by George French and the Runyons.

"My mother tells me that the road was along the river instead of where Road 116 is located now. "There are many legends concerning the settlement of French township on the west side of the river that I am unable to tell at this time due to space.

"I thought that I'd write this letter since I notice that the society wished any material concerning the pioneer days of Adams county.

"We do have some relics of these early pioneers—as my mother has a half-penny which was left in the post office when it moved to Linn Grove.

"Andrew Gottschalk, a few years before he died, gave some history of the town of Linn Grove and mentioned Ellough Sheldon, my grandfather, as being the first postmaster, in the Berne Witness. If you could get that issue from the Witness you may be able to get some history of Linn Grove since there are very few people around who would know much about its history.

"Homer Neaderhouser or his sister at Berne may know something of the early history of Linn Grove.

"I am wondering whether I would be eligible to become a member of your society. Of course I've been away from home teaching—and would be unable to attend meetings—since I'm located near Wheeling, W. Va., during the school year. I'd like to become a member."

Stolen Berne Auto Found In Kentucky

Youth Is Arrested For Vehicle Theft

A car stolen from Berne Friday night has been recovered near Paris, Ky., according to word received here from Kentucky state police.

Kentucky officials said that they have arrested William Manor, 18, of Elizabeth, Pa., in connection with the vehicle theft. Details of his capture are not known but it is understood that the Pennsylvania youth is being held in Kentucky.

Meanwhile, local authorities have recovered a car apparently stolen by Manor in Elizabeth and abandoned in a woods about one-fourth of a mile east of Berne.

The car, which bore no license plates, was discovered early Sunday morning by Adams county conservation officer Jack Hurst. Manor apparently left that car and then stole the one from the used car lot of the Berne Oil company to continue his flight. Local authorities are continuing the investigation.

Bluffton Guard Unit Receives Citation

High Proficiency In Summer Maneuvers

Bluffton's battery C of the Indiana national guard has received the Ben H. Watt trophy and citation for showing the highest degree of proficiency of any unit of the 38th Indiana infantry division during summer maneuvers.

Capt. Cecil Lockwood Jr., battery commander, was notified of the award following the division's association meeting at Indianapolis Sept. 28.

The citation read that battery C, 138th anti-aircraft artillery (automatic weapons) battalion (self propelled), "distinguished itself by attaining a performance index of 86.69, highest in the 38th infantry division, during field training Aug. 3-17 at Camp Claybanks, Mich."

"The outstanding record of battery C, 138th AAA battalion, established during the 1957 field training period, reflects great credit on the 38th infantry divisions and is worthy of emulation."

Adams county residents who are members of the unit include: M/Sgt. Otto Fuhrman, Jr.; SFC Ervin Ewell, SFC Donald K. Flowers, Sgt. Arco C. Gird, Sp3. Dale W. Denough, Sp3 John C. Geels, Sp3 Roger F. To offset this, Mrs. Vizard pointed out, "each person who sincerely believes that America needs a two-party system, is asked to give $1 to the present campaign. This will insure a campaign fund for the little candidates to use against the candidates of big business and the vested interests," she said.

Braves Rip Back But the Braves—who have to read those "choke-up" stories every time they lose a game—ripped right back. Tommy Byrne gave them the opening when he hit pinch-hitter Nippy Jones and the Braves suddenly were in business because the next two hitters were Red Schoendienst and Johnny Logan.

Of all the Braves, these are the two most versatile players—the sort that abound on the Yankee squad. Hanevy, of course, was bunting and Schoendienst laid it down like the book says it should be.

Then came the scrappy little Logan and he showed 'em why he's known as a clutch player with a solid double into the left field corner that tied it up.

Now the Yankees had their backs to the wall and Stengel had to play for defense all the way to stop the run. He moved Kubek to center, took out Mantle, and inserted 41-year-old Enos Slaughter in left field.

Mathews didn't make a hit in the first three games, but he had rapped a solid double in the fourth inning and he put a 2-2 pitch into the right field bleachers that turned County Stadium and perhaps all Milwaukee into a bedlam of noise.

It was the big hit of a big ball game and it could just be that it was the one that put the Braves on the glory road.

BRAVES EKE OUT 7-to-5 WIN OVER YANKS

HANK AARON of the Milwaukee Braves is forced at second base in the second inning on Covington's grounder to McDougald, whose relay to Coleman registered the out, as umpire Jocko Conlan calls the play. A capacity crowd witnessed one of the most exciting games in World Series history, when the Yankees tied the score in the ninth inning on a three-run homer by Elston Howard, went ahead 5-to-4 in the tenth, only to lose the game in the last half of the tenth by virtue of a score tying run by the Braves followed by Eddie Mathews' two-run homer. The win knotted the series at two apiece.

Driver Unhurt As Train Hits Truck

Fined For Failure To Observe Signal

Claude J. Dennison, 42, of Monroe route one, escaped injury when his truck was hit by a train at the Monroe street crossing of the Pennsylvania railroad Saturday afternoon.

According to the police report, Dennison proceeded across the tracks against the flasher signals and the truck was hit on the right side. Damage to the truck was estimated at $350. L. R. McDowell, of Decatur, was the engineer of the train and J. J. Bowling, of Fort Wayne, was the conductor.

Dennison, who was arrested on a charge of crossing a railroad against the flashers, appeared in city court this morning and was fined $1 and costs.

Also in city court today was Glen Dague, 26, of Decatur route six, who was arrested on charges of reckless driving and driving without a license following a minor accident in Geneva Friday night. He was fined $1 and costs on the first count, $25 on the second count and given a six months suspended sentence.

Larry Allen Imel, 19, of Fort Wayne, arrested Tuesday following an accident at the corner of First and Monroe streets, was to appear in city court today to answer a charge of driving a truck without registration plates. His case has been continued to next Monday.

FOUR

dicted the four last May after newspapers unearthed irregularities during Smith's term as head of a multi-million dollar highway spending program that involved quick profits on land and equipment deals in various parts of Indiana.

Draw Big Venue

Other indictments accused Smith and Indianapolis "Glo" salesman Arthur J. Mogilner with bribery, and Austin house-mover Marvin Preble with filing a false claim for work that was not done.

A panel of 300 persons was chosen from which Prosecutor G. Tindler and defense attorneys were to agree on a jury to hear the conspiracy charges before Special Judge Walter Pritchard.

Both sides agreed another panel would be drawn if the jury could not be chosen from the original list.

The state sought to prove the four defendants conspired to embezzle public money by producing a mysterious "Dean Burton" as a go-between to buy two lots which eventually were resold to the state at a profit of $22,800.

Mrs. Robert Quinlan and Mrs. John Acker said they sold their lots for a total of $2,500 to "Burton" whom they never saw. "Burton" then sold to Peak for $3,000, the records show, and Peak resold the lots in his parents' name to the Highway Department for $25,800.

Tindler sought to prove that "Burton" was actually Teverbaugh.

After the scandals broke, Peak returned the $22,800 profit to the state. Marion County grand juries returned a total of 31 charges against six persons since the scandal stories began unfolding last April 11.

Report Hits Craig

In a second grand jury report, Mogilner was accused of giving Smith $41,000 to influence awarding of more than a million dollars worth of equipment contracts. This report also held Craig "morally if not legally responsible" for the "misconducts" of highway officials he appointed.

Craig, in an appearance before the grand jury, blasted newspapers for using "witchhunt" tactics, and denied he could be expected to know of the scandals while he was in office from 1953 to 1957.

The scandals took a national spotlight last summer when a Senate subcommittee sent investigators to Indiana, then held hearings in Washington, during which the four on trial today repeatedly took the Fifth Amendment.

Also summoned to the Washington hearings were top officers of the Carpenters Union who allegedly made "quickie" profits on land sales for the Tri-State highway in Gary.

A grand jury in Lake County, scene of those deals, declined to indict on grounds the actual transactions occurred in Indianapolis and it had no jurisdiction.
