Eisenhower Speaks To Navy Graduates

Urges Graduates Be Crusaders Of Peace

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UPI)—President Eisenhower today urged 900 midshipmen graduating from the U.S. Naval Academy to become crusaders for peace.

He said no longer was it enough for a military officer to be "a skilled technician, a courageous and inspiring leader of battle units, even an experienced and seasoned commander of mighty fleets and armies."

"His function of helping prevent war and of furthering a just peace has become of transcendent importance," the President said.

"For modern war is preposterously and mutually annihilative; peace is the imperative of our age."

Eisenhower delivered a conventional commencement address of advice and counsel. He did not comment directly on any pressing domestic and world problems.

But he did emphasize the importance of unity and modern, efficient management in the armed forces, a main objective of his controversial defense reorganization plan.

"An officer of the armed services who persists in adhering to obsolete points of view is a liability, not an asset, to our nation," the President said.

Obsolescence in military management and organization can be as dangerous to our nation as obsolescence in weaponry.

He urged the new junior officers "to ponder the significance of the armed forces in terms of their necessity, size, cost and evolution in the world climate of today and tomorrow." This, he added, "will help you along the road to responsible leadership for peace."

Eisenhower flew here by helicopter for the morning graduation exercises to permit him to stick to a tight schedule. It included greeting President Theodor Heuss of the West German republic at Washington National Airport shortly after noon.

The graduates, taught by the Rev. H. E. Settlage, are: Duane Arnold, Judy Arnold, Janet Beer, Nan Bogges, Sue Ann Borne, Karen Brandt, Rene Brown, Kenneth Cagle, Roger Dick, Carol Ann Easley.

Jerry Franz, Rose Marie Gerber, Joyce Haggard, Emma Heare, Barbara Hunt, Arlene Johnson, Ruth Ann McAlhane, Kepeth Kolter, Bill Kohler, Barbara McKean, Sharon Mattax, Danny Michaels, Rosalyn Mishler, Max Moser, Betty Neuschwander.
