

Hartke Denounces Troops To Lebanon

Blames Republicans In Mideast Troubles

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—Evansville Mayor Vance Hartke, Democratic nominee for U.S. senator from Indiana, today joined his Republican opponent, Governor Handley, in denouncing the use of American troops in Lebanon.

Hartke said it was "a mistake—an unfortunate thing." But he blamed the Republican administration for Mideast troubles. He said Secretary of State John Foster Dulles had not kept himself in a position to deal with Arab states.

"Just a few years ago our relations with the Arabian nations were in good shape. Now there has been a complete change and we are suffering from it," Hartke said.

Hartke spoke Wednesday at meetings of the Democratic state nominees and State Committee. Political observers believed statements of unity at the meeting indicated State Chairman Charles E. Skillen will keep his job—at least until after the fall election. The committee voted to raise a 1958 campaign jackpot of $300,000. It would be the biggest in Indiana in the party's history. Party leaders said the money would come from the Dollars for Democrats organization and by heavy contributions from small businessmen who have suffered severely during the Eisenhower administration.

State Sen. Marshall Kizer of Plymouth, a member of the state committee, said Hartke would have complete party support.

"The Democratic Party this year is unified as never before.

We are working as a team—the candidates along with the state organizations," said Hartke. Earlier, Hartke had said the GOP was "attempting to take public attention away from the Republican highway scandals in the administration of former Gov. George N. Craig by trying to raise the corruption issue in Evansville."

Hartke said a secret survey of Evansville by the American Social Hygiene Society showed "gambling and prostitution at an irreducible minimum" during his administration.

Fort Scott, Kansas Hit By High Water

Roof-Deep Waters Follow Flash Flood

By United Press International
Roof-deep floodwaters rolled through Fort Scott, Kan., early today in the worst of a series of flash floods that also hit parts of Missouri, Illinois and Pennsylvania.

The Marmaton River, which boiled over its banks and forced about 700 persons to flee Wednesday, crested early today at eight feet above bankful.

A flurry of tornado clouds skipped through the air Wednesday night near Cheyenne, Wyo.; Bennet and Denver, Colo.; Amarillo, Tex.; and Republic, Ozark and Clever in southwest Missouri. No damage was reported in any of the twisters.

Near Edgewood, N.M., a six-car chain reaction collision on rain-washed U.S. 66 killed one woman and injured 11 other persons, nine of them seriously.

In the East, authorities declared a state of emergency in Sharon, Pa., as the Shanango River spilled into the city's business district and a residential section.

The floodwaters swept into 200 homes and business in Fort Scott, a city of 10,000 persons near the Missouri border, climbing to a depth of eight feet in some sections.

Most of the refugees took shelter with neighbors, but the Red Cross cared for about 300 persons during the night.

The Grand River overflowed its banks in northern Missouri from Chillicothe to its mouth at Brunswick, and engineers estimated damage along the Grand at about $1,700,000.

Estimates of damage at Sharon, Pa., ranged as high as $500,000. Floodwaters there were at their highest since 1913. A score of families had to be rescued by boats.

Indiana Mercury Is Oozing Upward

More Rainfall Is Forecast In State

By United Press International
The Indiana mercury oozed upward today in a muggy prelude to more thundershowers.

Forecasters expected temperatures to reach the mid-80s downstate, 83 across the state's mid-section, and near 80 in the north.

Swollen rivers were still rising in some southern Indiana areas, and the Weatherman said scattered thundershowers will hit the southern counties today and tonight and overspread the rest of the state Friday.

The Wabash River was still rising at Vincennes in Knox County, scene of heavy crop damage from water pushed over riverbanks by several days of heavy downpours.

But streams were falling at Wabash, Logansport, Petersburg, and Bedford.

Evansville's 81 was the hottest reading reported Wednesday to the Indianapolis Weather Bureau. Other points had reading in the 70s. Temperatures cooled this morning to the 50s and 60s.

Reading were due for a drop to the 60s tonight and a rise Friday to 90 in the south, 87 in central areas and 85 in the north. Saturday will be "fair and a little cooler."
