The Adams county memorial hospital will open its new addition Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. Miss Marie Felber, R.N., and superintendent of nurses, will cut the tape to the entrance. The building will be dedicated to those who have given their lives in the great wars of America from the revolution to the Korean conflict. Every veteran, every civic minded person will want to be present for this great occasion.

The Handley state patronage machine has turned into a talking machine, spewing forth thousands of words of fear and smear in the last-ditch attempt to stop the victory campaign of the Democrats. Let the Democrats remember that they only lower themselves when they stoop to match the campaign efforts of their opponents. Let the Republicans place their signs on all the state highway rights-of-way that is what they wish to do. The thinking people will vote against them because of it, since most people believe in beautifying our highways. But when Democrats stoop to tearing down these Republican signs, or to placing Democratic signs over them, they are only lowering themselves. Apparently this happened in Allen county over the weekend. Whether it was done by individuals or children is not known, but it certainly did not have the approval of Alex Campbell, Allen county Democratic chairman. Let's hope that no individuals in Adams county will do such a thing in the last hot moments of the campaign, since it would hurt the people's opinion of the Democratic party.

Modern Etiquette By ROBERTA LEE

Q. A neighbor's daughter is to be married at my church, and I have received no invitation to the wedding. I should like very much to attend, however, and wonder if this would be proper?

A. If your church is very small, and the wedding invitations must be limited, it would be improper for you to squeeze in. If, however, the church is large, there would be nothing at all wrong with your going and sitting somewhere in the rear of the church.

Q. A new neighbor has begun calling me by my first name, although I am quite a bit older than she. I use her last name. Shouldn't she use mine, too?

A. Yes, she should. You should be the first one to begin first names.

Q. Is it the girl's privilege to select the table when entering a restaurant with a male escort?

A. No; she should allow her escort to do this.

Household Scrapbook By ROBERTA LEE

Bleaching
Table linens, muslin, and other unbleached goods, can be bleached by preparing a boiler of bluing water as for rinsing clothes. Place the articles in the boiler and allow to boil well. Hang on the line without further rinsing, and at their next washing these articles will be perfectly white.

First Aid
If a child falls and bumps his head, cover it quickly with a piece of ice or a cold cloth. Often the bump will disappear without a trace. This has to be done promptly for best results.

CHAPTER 21
SALUTING smartly, the man addressed Captain Colin Campbell: "I'm Jason Maxwell, sir, and I have recruited twelve men who wish to join your unit." The names he read from a sheet of paper included his own.

"Thank you, Mr. Maxwell," Colin said gravely. He hesitated a moment, wondering how to tell this crippled man that his personal services would not be needed.

"You can use all of us, sir," asked Maxwell. His eyes pleaded desperately.

Colin looked searchingly into his face and quickly changed his mind. "Why, certainly," he said, smiling. "Of course I can. Have your men report at once and have each bring either a wheelbarrow or a shovel."

"Yes, sir! Will you swear them in, sir?"

"Oh, yes, of course."

"Well, report as soon as possible, sir!"

Jason Maxwell hobbled away and Colin sighed with relief. Jason should not be in the army, but Colin remembered the gawky youths drilling on the vacant lot while the loafers snickered. He had seen the glow in Jason's eyes. Colin thought the war was a nightmare, but to Jason Maxwell it was a dream. The thought of Maxwell's happiness lifted Colin's spirits.

Searching the barn for something with which to begin cleaning up, Colin considered all that needed to be acquired — food, cooking utensils, blankets, shoes, arms, uniforms. He hadn't the least idea how he was to obtain these things. Obviously the supply center at Dare's Landing was not yet functioning at full capacity.

He was scraping away at the mess on the barn floor with a broken shovel he had found in the granary when Jason Maxwell reappeared with his men. In spite of the fact that each man carried a shovel or pushed a wheelbarrow, there was a distinct air of military precision about them. Colin blessed providence for sending Jason Maxwell his way.

Jason lined up his men and called their names. When he had finished, Colin said, "Very good, Sergeant."

"Sergeant!" Jason flushed in happy astonishment but recovered instantly.

"Correct, Sergeant Maxwell," Colin hoped he was maintaining the military formality that Jason expected and wanted. "You will instruct the men in their present duties and report to me."

"Very good, sir," Jason Maxwell's voice possessed a tone indispensible to all good sergeants. "Police it up!" he told his men and then joined Colin. "Next, sir?"

13th Anniversary Is Marked By UN

Concert Features U.N. Celebration

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) —The United Nations graduated into its teens today, experiencing the same alternating flashes of victory and disappointment as any normal, healthy youth.

The 81-nation world organization celebrated its 13th birthday at a time when statesmen were talking rapidly, even desperately, to save the world from the possibility of a nuclear holocaust.

Their hopes were buoyed by the fact that in the 13 years since the United Nations was organized one potentially explosive situation after another has passed without erupting into World War III.

The Middle East was relatively quiet. The Far East was simmering but showed some hope of cooling. The East-West conflict was active on the propaganda front but there appeared to be no immediate danger of its becoming a shooting war.

A technical agreement in Geneva on means of detecting nuclear explosions opened the door a crack on disarmament.

Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld received messages of congratulations from all over the world.

By order of County Commissioners
Edward F. Jaberg, Auditor, Adams County,
October 24 and 29 1958

20 Years Ago Today

Oct. 24, 1938 — A representative of the state board of tax commissioners will be at the Adams county court house Nov. 3 to examine budgets and proposed tax levies of the several taxing units in the county.

Robert Strickler, of Decatur, was elected vice president of the young people's organization of the Church of God, Fort Wayne district, at a quarterly rally held at Fort Wayne. The Rev. Glenn Marshall, pastor of the local church, was named to the advisory committee.

Herman H. Krueckeberg, of this city, was elected president of the Zion Walther league inter-river zone district at a rally held at the Lutheran church at Schumm, O.

A truck belonging to the Blue Creek dairy in Berne was destroyed by fire of undetermined origin while parked in that town. A cash register stolen from a Willshire, O., pool room in a recent robbery, was recovered near the covered bridge at Pleasant Mills. The register was badly damaged.

Girl Scouts

Brownie troop number 30 met at the Lincoln school. Officers elected were Carolyn Rash, president; Karen Odle, treasurer; and Vicki Lehman, scribe. After dues were collected, a hula hoop contest was held with prizes going to the winners. Sue Banning served the treat and Linda Merriman will treat next week. The meeting was closed with the Brownie arch.

Scribe, Vicki Lehman
