Integrate Florida Schools

ALBANY (UPI) — Token integration came peacefully to Florida today and was extended quietly in Virginia.

Two segregationists, including a friend of race agitator John Kasper, turned up at the Orchard Villa school in Miami but were paid no attention by the few white children and the 15 Negroes who arrived for the first day of school.

Only four Negroes — those assigned to the school by the Dade County School Board — were admitted at Orchard Villa. Twenty other Negroes were due at a white school at the Homestead Air Force Base elementary school near Miami.

The first integration in a rural county in Virginia began without trouble in Front Royal.

Sixty Negroes were assigned to classes at formerly white schools in Alexandria, Front Royal, Norfolk and Charlottesville in Virginia.

Seven Negroes entered two Alexandria elementary schools without disturbance. It was the start of the second year of token integration in Virginia which gave up in court orders after a year of massive resistance to integration of any kind at the public school level.

The Orchard Villa school in Miami is in a changing neighborhood where the makeup of the community has turned from mostly white to mostly Negro in the past year. Only a few white pupils were left in the district to attend the school. But it signalled Florida's first acceptance of integration in public schools.

Fred Hockett, a Miami carpenter who is a friend of Kasper and a co-organizer of the local White Citizens Councils, and J. B. Stoner of Atlanta, claiming to be the imperial wizard of the Christian Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, were at Orchard Villa.

Security Council Overrides Red Veto

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — The Security Council, overriding Russia's attempted veto, voted early today to send a four-nation committee to investigate the situation in Communist-threatened Laos.

The vote in the 11-member council was 10-1 against the Russians.

The negative Soviet vote ordinarily would have killed the measure, but the council had ruled in a previous 10-1 vote that the creation of the investigating committee was a procedural matter, not subject to the veto.

The four nations making up the committee are Argentina, Italy, Japan and Tunisia, all members of the council. They scheduled a meeting at noon e.d.t. today, and it appeared likely investigators would be on the way to Laos by the end of the week.

Red Ambassador Protests

Soviet Ambassador Arkady A. Sobolev protested the council's decision bitterly, charging that the majority was in effect rewriting the U.N. charter when it overrode his veto.

"The delegation of the U.S.S.R. . . . regards this action as nonexistent, illegal and not binding on anyone to whom it is addressed," Sobolev said.

U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge and other spokesmen for the Western Big Three rejected the Soviet charge, pointing out that the Charter specifically exempts procedural matters from the big-power veto.

The council debate focused on the resolution creating the investigating committee. Neither Laos' request for U.N. troops to expel Communist invaders from its territory nor the U.S. charge that Russia is cooperating with the attackers was mentioned.

The situation in Laos itself was obscure. A government spokesman in the nation's capital said Monday the Red invaders from North Viet Nam have withdrawn from northern Laos, leaving only native Communist guerrillas to face loyal troops in the area.

Tried "Double Veto"

In Bangkok, however, Laos' Foreign Minister Khampan Panya told officials of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization that "conditions are deteriorating" in his ravaged country.

Panya is on his way to New York to attend the meeting of the U.N. General Assembly that opens a week from today.

Sobolev used every means at his command to block council action, including the "double veto" with which Russia has prevented procedural actions in the past, but

County Rural Schools Opened This Morning, Others On Wednesday

Series Of Meetings On New School Act

A series of orientation meetings on the school corporation reorganization act of 1959 will be conducted throughout the county later this month, with nine sites being named by Judge Myles F. Parrish and county superintendent Gail Grubill.

Discussion at these meetings will center on the meaning of the new school law and its application possibilities in Adams county.

The meetings are a result of an earlier discussion by Dr. Merle T. Strom, of Ball State Teachers College, with school trustees, school board members, and administrative personnel.

The meeting will allow the county residents an opportunity to become acquainted with the mechanics of the law, and give them an insight as to how it can be successful in the county. County residents will also be asked to consider possible candidates for the five lay members on the proposed study committee. The nine-man committee will survey the school conditions and recommend what action should be taken to align the county school system, in keeping with state requirements, stemming from the new law. One member of the committee will be chosen from the county school superintendent's office, one from the county trustees, one from the school boards, and one from the principals and superintendents of city and consolidated schools, besides the five lay members.

Because the survey and study of existing educational facilities are mandatory by the new law.

Judge Parrish and Supt. Grubill feel that this series of meetings will go much to acquaint and orientate the county residents with the act. All persons are encouraged to attend at least one of these meetings, preferably in their own vicinity. If this is not possible, then the attendance of any of the other meetings will suffice.

The dates for the meetings and the discussion leaders are:

Sept. 11 at the Immanuel Lutheran school in Union township with Gail Grubill, county superintendent.

Sept. 14 at Hartford township school with Eugene Burry, trustee.

Sept. 15 at Pleasant Mills with Gerald Vizard, principal.

Sept. 16 at Jefferson township with Gail Grubill.

Sept. 17 at Berne-French with Supt. E. M. Webb.

Sept. 18 at Monmouth with Judge Parrish.

Sept. 21 at the Northwest school in Decatur with Supt. W. Guy Brown and Gail Grubill.

Sept. 21 at Adams Central with Herman Franz as chairman and a discussion leader to be announced.

Sept. 21 at Geneva with Judge Parrish.

All discussions will start at 8 p.m. on the dates listed above.

Judge Parrish also announced that the county school convention will be conducted Oct. 14 at the Adams county court room at 7:30 p.m.

September Term Of Court Opened Today

The September term of the Adams circuit court opened officially this morning ending the vacation term of the court with impressive ceremonies, swearing in the new officers of the Adams county bar association.

For the first time in the history of the association, the new officers received their oaths in formal ceremonies at the opening of a court session. David Macklin, the new president, received the oath of office from Judge Myles F. Parrish, while Judge G. Remy Bierly, of the appellate court, administered the vice-president's oath to C. H. Muselman. Judge Parrish did the honors for treasurer Lewis L. Smith, and Judge G. Remy Bierly concluded with secretary Richard J. Sullivan.

Macklin delivered a short acceptance speech, thanking his fellow attorneys for the honor of the office, and expressing his will of carrying out the functions of office for adjournment.

House Republican Leader Charles A. Halleck of Indiana reported that Eisenhower was "pleased at the outcome of the labor reform bill because it is substantially what he asked for."

The measure is still awaiting the President's signature.

Dirksen said Eisenhower "expressed gratification about things generally."

He said the President was "particularly happy" that the House upheld by one vote his veto of a public works money bill and "was gratified" that the Senate sustained his second veto of controversial housing legislation.
