

Grades And Gasoline

Schools all over the state started this week, and more and more school superintendents and principals were faced with the increasing problem of teenage car owners.

The special problem of teenage car owners and drivers is this: to afford the car, the student must take an outside job. Soon the job and car are crowding out homework. The student loses interest in school, in books, etc., and finally drops out. Many intelligent boys and girls, who could become college graduates and highly respected professional people with high incomes, future security, and many fine opportunities for their families, throw all of it away just to have a car for two or three years in high school.

Besides poor grades and loss of interest, the parking of student automobiles around the school present a physical hazard. Off-street parking is not available for student drivers. They must then park along the streets. But younger children, from the grades now attending the high school, cut back and forth across the streets. Parked cars make this very dangerous. Neither the students crossing the streets, nor the ones driving up to and leaving the schools are as careful as persons who have had more experience with heavy-traffic driving around schools.

The main issue of grades came to the fore a year ago when the high school principal at Rexburg, Idaho, made a survey of his senior class. Not one straight-A student drove an automobile to school. Yet 83% of the failures did! In between, 15% of the B students drove, 41% of the C students, and 71% of the D students!

Other principals have found the same correlation. And colleges today do not allow underclassmen to drive while at college.

It will certainly make college tougher for those who get used to driving to high school, only to be told when they enter college that they can no longer drive. Why handicap your child?

Joy riding during the lunch hour, hot-rodding after school, beer-drinking in the cars, or beer forays to Ohio, are just a few of the disciplinary problems that car ownership by teenagers bring to school and civil authorities. These authorities cannot solve the problems without the wholehearted cooperation of the parents.

Many private schools and more and more public schools prohibit students from driving to school. At Danville three years ago the principal found that 50 students were driving to school in that small town. A campaign to discourage this took place, and last year only 25 drove, while this year only 8 will drive.

In Kendallville students who drive even occasionally to school must register at the principal's office. Parking is restricted near the school house. Youngsters who drive and eat lunch at the school are not allowed to drive during the noon hour.

Explosion Aboard Airliner Kills One

MEXICO CITY (UPI)—An explosion aboard a Mexican airliner, apparently caused by a bomb, killed one person Tuesday and started a fire which injured eight others, it was reported today.

None of the two or three Americans among the 16 persons aboard the plane was known to have been hurt.

Capt. David Torre Lathan, the pilot, landed the plane safely at the oil town of Poza Rica in southeastern Mexico. Federal authorities impounded the plane in preparation for an investigation of the explosion.

The only fatal casualty of the blast was identified as E. Polowski, about 50, of Mexico City. He either jumped or was blown out of the cabin door, which was jolted open by the explosion over the coastal town of Nautla, 260 miles northeast of here.

Two crewmen, co-pilot Hector Tamborel and steward Ricardo Soto, were injured fighting the fire. Six of the plane's 13 passengers suffered second or third degree burns on their arms and heads.

Great Potentials For County Cancer Society

(Editor's note: From the Adams county chapter of the American cancer society, this is the last in a series of articles explaining the new policy and the cancer society's program.)

Volunteers who meet Thursday at 8 p.m. at the Youth and Community center in Decatur for the reorganization meeting of the Adams county unit of the American cancer society will find there is great potential for county development of the society.

Whether the Adams county unit of the national cancer society can continue to help present and future cancer victims and to support research into the cause and cure for cancer depends on the volunteers who come to the reorganization meeting Thursday. And the cancer society has invited all potential volunteers to attend.

The funds which go into research on cancer are reviewed by a national advisory council, taking this part of the three-part program out of the hands of the local unit. The last two-family service and public and professional education—have been and can continue to be the areas of constructive work for the local unit.

Potential in Family Service
Volunteers will see that the cancer society has done much work in the past to help cancer patients and the families. The local society has had an active program in helping cancer patients by supplying bandages and equipment that may be needed in the home, such as hospital beds and wheel chairs.

Although the local unit does not help finance such things as hospital bills, it helps as much as possible with the family at home. Transportation for treatment, and nursing, housekeeping assistance and rehabilitation aids can also be provided. What is done depends on the need of the patient and the funds and volunteers available.

The public education program, which is helped greatly through the independent campaign's house-to-house canvasses, is meant to alert the public to the need for action, not to alarm the people. At the heart of the education program is the recommendation that every adult have an annual health check-up, however well he or she may feel. This program is a year-round task that comes to its climax during the crusade in the spring.

In Adams county, the cancer society has purchased books for three county libraries, shown films to groups such as home demonstration clubs, and has distributed educational material about cancer, such as the slim little booklet, "101 Answers to Your Questions About Cancer."

Help Doctors, Students
The potential of the local program of education is so great it may reach into professional education. Although it has not done this before, the local group could provide scholarships for students interested in the sciences. These scholarships could begin as early as the sophomore or junior year in high school, to be given to students who show interest and aptitude in the sciences, and who indicate they would like to go on into medicine or technology.

Professional education may go beyond the giving of fellowships and scholarships. Part of the attack in the education program is the production and circulation of films, slides, and exhibits, and also organization of professional refresher courses, conferences and meetings for doctors, dentists, and nurses. For instance, in 1957, every physician in the United States received special information about the new developments in the diagnosis and therapy of cancer. Part of this work in professional education may come from the local chapter.

The potential is great. Whether such an expanded program can even begin in Adams county depends on Thursday evening's meeting.
