College Dean Held On Murder Charge

BATON ROUGE, La. (UPI) — Dr. George H. Mickey, distinguished scientist and dean of the Louisiana State University Graduate School, took breakfast in the parish jail today — charged with murder in the bludgeon — slaying of his spinster scientific protégé.

Dressed in the jail regulation white T-shirt and blue jeans, the biologist, world lecturer and church board member — whose appointment last April as graduate dean was supposed to boost the school's prestige — sat with three other prisoners in a cell on block No. 1.

Mickey's attorney, Robert L. Klempner, emphasized the dean had not confessed to anything. He said the dean knew nothing about the slaying.

Ship Body Home

But the sheriff's office, which booked Mickey at dusk on the fifth day of unflagging investigation, said it had done so on the district — a attorney's — warrant "charging him with the murder of Margaret Rosamond McMillan."

The body of "Rosie" McMillan, 38, a tall, statuesque woman with naturally grey hair tinted brown, was shipped home to Evanston, Ill., for burial.

The red letters on Mickey's jeans, "EBR (for East Baton Rouge) parish jail," were symbolic of the shocked talk around the hotel lobbies, statehouse, and academic community. Not since Gov. Earl Long was hustled off to a state mental institution—and hustled back under his own steam—last spring has the town awakened to such startling news.

Held Without Bail

Mickey — he will be 50 this month — is being held without bail for action of the regular grand jury, which convenes Feb. 18. Chief criminal Deputy Sheriff J. B. Klinge Jr. announced at 5:30 p.m. Thursday that Mickey had been arrested. Two minutes after the announcement, the dean was booked on a warrant signed by Dist. Atty. J. St. Clair Favrot.

Last Sunday, Mickey was re-elected president of Beta Beta Beta, a national biological fraternity. Early the same day, the body of Rosie McMillan, his alleged victim — a biology pioneer in her own right and a professor in the university's New Orleans branch — was found beside her little Renault car in a narrow private road near the swollen Mississippi River.

Her skull was cracked with 13 blows from a sharp, heavy weapon. She lay in a massive stain of blood, and the coroner said she must have bled to death about an hour after the attack. Besides teaching she had been researching, on a government grant, for the space program, studying the possibility of using algae to replenish the air for human beings in space ships.

Girl Scouts

Girl Scout troop 112 held their meeting Tuesday after school. They opened the meeting with the Girl Scout promise. Dues and roll call were taken. The girls talked about a new badge that they could take. Then Sue Godsey and Barbara Rydell served refreshments. The group closed the meeting by singing taps.

Founded by Jane A. Delano, the Red Cross nursing service has 58,000 chapter-enrolled nurses standing by today for community service. In cases of epidemics, floods, and other disasters, a person who is trained to assist the injured can be of invaluable assistance. That is why local women are being asked to enroll in this home training program.
