Sectional Fever

Adams Central is the site this evening of the beginning session of the 1960 sectional tourney.

Basketballitis is so severe in Indiana that if a choice between winning the sectional and flunking out of high school were given, it is questionable which would win out in the county.

Good, clean competition is the heart and soul of a democratic, capitalistic society. For this reason, basketball brings many good points with it.

Of course, there is always the danger of overdoing. But if we are able to learn, through participating in basketball, just what is acceptable, and sportsmanlike, and what is not, a large educational benefit results.

Training for life is more than just learning; it is also accepting and bettering the standards by which we live.

These standards are severely tested during the sectional. Tempers will flare; pranks and good-natured fun may get out of hand. Youthful inexperience leads to excesses, occasionally, but after all, that is how youth learns. So, we can very well hope that all of the high school students of the county will be better citizens when the tourney ends.

The fans, members, and coaches of every team in the county are training, hoping, and working for victory. However, on Saturday evening there will be just one winner, and seven sad teams.

Life won't stop with the end of this basketball season! Next year there will be more games, more tournaments, new winners. Some will be graduating this year, but they will find their interest just as great next year. They will be just as anxious for a victory.

The real test of the sectional lies in the ability of every fan and team member to accept the judgement of the referees and officials. They are trained, and on the spot. They are human, and make mistakes. But their job is to call the plays as they see them, not to please any group of fans.

The team that plays clean, hard ball to the best of their ability, never despairing, the fans that yell for victory, but never try to take advantage of the opponent, these are the groups that can be proud next week, in victory or in defeat.

Fine Gains In Space Program Related By Ike

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Eisenhower told Congress today American scientists have performed "miraculously" in advancing U.S. rocket technology in the past five years.

He added that substantial gains were made in the nation's aeronautics and space programs during 1959.

The President made the comments in forwarding to the House and Senate the second annual report on U.S. aeronautics and space activities.

"In the short period of a single year," he said, "a program of great complexity and scope was aligned so that the scientists of many organizations in and out of government could pool and coordinate their knowledge and skills."

"Much information of far-reaching significance was acquired on the frontiers of science and technology, substantial gains were made, ranging from advances in aircraft and space vehicle design to greatly improved understanding of the environment in which our planet exists."

Eisenhower said the space program grew in breadth and depth last year toward America's paramount goal—"conquest of space for the benefit of all mankind."

The report was made public amid a growing debate over U.S. defense posture in relation to the Soviet Union. The President's letter of transmittal did not mention Russia's accomplishments.

Eisenhower May Be Prince's Godfather

LONDON (UPI) — Historians were hauling out the records today to prove there's no reason why Queen Elizabeth's baby can't be given one of President Eisenhower's names and have him for a godfather.

So far Buckingham Palace has not commented on reports the boy born last Friday will be the first child of a reigning British sovereign to have an American president "stand" for him, by proxy or otherwise, at the christening font.

But historians said there are both family reasons and precedence for the new prince to be named for the American president and have him for a godfather. An American president was godfather to one British prince. In 1942 the late Franklin D. Roosevelt was the proxy godfather of Prince Michael of Kent.

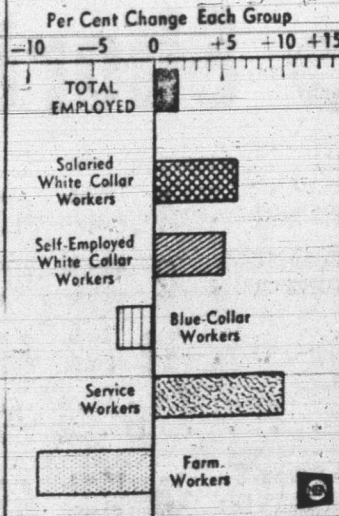

If Eisenhower became a godfather of Queen Elizabeth's second son that would be an historic first since Michael was not in the first line of the royal family. If this came to be, it is likely one of the infant prince's names would be David — Eisenhower's middle name and a name that has historic implications in Britain.

Many kings of Wales were named David and St. David is still the patron saint of that part of Elizabeth's realm. David is one of the names of Windsor. Although the Duke of Windsor, although he was once King Edward VIII, in family circles he is still called David.

Dry Shampoo

A dry shampoo will clean the hair of the person who is suffering from a bad cold. Massage dry cornmeal thoroughly into the scalp, then brush it out. The treatment will invigorate the scalp and at the same time give the hair a natural gloss, besides a much cleaner feeling.

CHANGES IN WORKER OCCUPATIONS Jan. '57-Jan. '60

TREND—Per cent change in worker occupations reflects what's happening to our working population of some 64 million as of January 1960. White collar employment has been growing more rapidly than blue collar employment. Ratio between the two as of now stands at about 55 white collar workers to every 45 blue collar workers. In early postwar years, just the reverse was true. Data from Labor Department.

Walther Leaguers Hear Judge Parrish

At a meeting of the inter-river zone of the Walther league, Judge Myles F. Parrish, of the Adams circuit court, told the group of young adults that "to be informed, is the best measure any man can ask for."

Since the February project of the Walther league is to inform the public during an election year of their rights and privileges, Judge Parrish was asked to tell the group of his opinions of "The informed man."

"A part of the Walther league teachings state that a strong citizen must carry strong convictions. And when voting, he should look closely at the issues, not too closely at the personalities. 'A good father is certainly not a prerequisite for the mayor's office, nor is a virtuous man likely to be the most informed,' the treatise goes on to say.

By looking at the greater issue, and not whether the man wears the right kind of ties with his suits, or goes to club meetings, a better government can be attained, the group believes.

Judge Parrish told them how "American citizenship today is the most highly treasured of all time. Not even Paul, who said, 'I am a man of Tarsus—a citizen of Rome'—could claim a deeper truth, a more universal application than what our citizenship entitles us," he added.

Norbert Selking, of Root township, served as moderator at the meeting at the Decatur Zion Lutheran parish hall Monday night with the Rev. L. W. Schulenberg, of the Preble Lutheran church, giving the invocation and benediction. The meeting was well attended from the Decatur-Fort Wayne area.

Top Non-Defense Spender Is HEW

By LYLE C. WILSON
 United Press International
 WASHINGTON (UPI) — The doubtful distinction of being the biggest non-defense spender in the government is won by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

HEW wins by a country mile. None other is even close. This is a switch from the usual calling of win, place and show in the governmental spending sweepstakes.

Place, or second position, usually is conceded to interest on the national debt. The debt, itself, is so large as to be incomprehensible to the average intellect. The carrying charge in interest still is within human ken, a mere $9,585,000.00. That's BILLIONS, friends.

Major national security is the big spending item, $45,568,000.00. All of these figures are for the fiscal year 1961. Major national security properly can be added to the sum budgeted for international affairs and finance for a grand national defense total of nearly $50,000,000.00.

Budget Is Misleading
 The 1961 budget for HEW is only $2,516,694,000. But the budget is misleading. Further along in the big budget book is a section devoted to government trust funds. Transactions in these trust funds do not show in the ordinary Treasury figures on tax revenue and spending. The trust funds are well fed by tax revenue, however, and a lot of it.

In fiscal 1961, HEW will distribute from the federal old-age and survivors insurance trust fund a huge sum, $11,651,698,000. This sum from a special trust account added to the $3,516,694,000 appropriated to HEW brings the combined HEW spending total to nearly $16,000,000,000.

The government will not lose money on this trust fund spending. It will collect in direct taxes nearly $11,000,000,000 and receive more than $50,000,000 from the states, courtesy of state tax payers. The trust fund will receive more than $500,000,000 in interest on its investments. This interest is a direct charge on the federal taxpayer because it represents interest on government bonds held in the trust.

18 Cents of Each Dollar
 The nearly $11,000,000,000 which will pour into the trust fund in fiscal 1961 will be the fruit of a tax on incomes although you make no tax return on it. This social security tax is deducted separately from the regular income tax. It is a big item, however.

Regular personal income tax in fiscal 1961 will extract from the taxpayers about 44,000,000,000, only four times as much as the social security taxes soak up.

Paying this tax to pensioners as rapidly as it is paid in by taxpayers, the government contributes to an astonishing situation. Tax Foundation Inc., 30 Rockefeller Center, New York, calculated that federal, state and local government payments made up 18 per cent—18 cents of every dollar—of income received in 1958 by Americans. Fiscal 1961 won't be much different.

These governmental disbursements include wages, salaries, social security, unemployment compensation, pensions, etc.

Wait a minute. Fiscal 1961 may be quite different from 1958. This is an election year and Congress usually in an election year does something for the old folks. If so it will do something for the taxpayers, too. It will hike welfare taxes.

 For cleaning marble objects, whip up a strong solution of sal soda and combine with fuller's earth. Coat the marble with this paste, let stay at least 24 hours, then remove.

Onions
 After dipping an onion into boiling water for a moment begin at the root and peel upwards. It will be found that this method does not affect the eyes.

THE BIG DROP—Passengers of a disabled plane could be parachuted en masse in removable sections such as these. Two sections of an airliner's cabin, each holding half the persons aboard, would be escape pods with airtight doors and cargo parachutes. Emergency supplies would be included. The pods would be dropped, according to Mechanix Illustrated, in case of a sabotage bomb, collision, structural failure or fire.
