Drive To Start

Rural people will be asked during the next month to make their annual contributions to aid the Red Cross.

Why should they support the Red Cross? What does the Red Cross do that helps rural people?

First of all, the Adams county Red Cross maintains a disaster relief committee. In the event of a tornado, or flood, or any kind of natural or man-made disaster, such as fire, the Red Cross stands ready and willing to help those who are the unfortunate victims.

Many young rural boys and girls have served with armed forces. Again, the Red Cross stands by, collecting blood which is used by military hospitals as well as civilian hospitals. In addition, the Red Cross verifies the need of emergency leave, or hardship discharges, or leave extensions. Red Cross personnel are available at every base, in the U.S. or overseas, to advise and counsel those with family problems or financial problems. Young men on emergency leave are loaned the funds immediately on their signatures to enable them to fly home as quickly as possible.

The Red Cross collects clothing, bedding, and funds to help the victims of disaster. Cloth for bandages is often collected. Hot coffee is provided at the scene of fires or other disaster work for those helping.

Families of those in service are helped in every way possible by Red Cross volunteers.

One of the greatest services of the Red Cross is the constant training of people for home nursing, first aid, swimming, and other necessary skills. These people form a cadre of trained personnel in the time of any great local or national need.

Hundreds of Red Cross volunteers in Adams county, including many rural people, help each year.

A total of $2,600 is needed for the work to be done next year. If every rural adult gives $1 or $2 and those especially well off give a little more, Adams county will be ready for any emergency that comes. Records which will help locate those who can be of service will be in good condition, through the staff and volunteer work.

But your help is needed! There are hundreds of section workers under the 12 township chairmen, who in turn report to the county co-chairmen, Homer Wintereg and Sylvan Sprunger.

Let's show them that their hard work is appreciated! Let's put the drive over the top! Which section will be the first to report 100% donations? And which townships?

Parker Makes Formal Bid In Governor Race

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Lt. Gov. Crawford F. Parker made his long-expected announcement that he would seek the Republican nomination for Indiana governor at a $10-a-plate party rally Wednesday night and predicted "the American pocketbook" would be the biggest issue in the 1960 election.

Parker, 54, a former Indiana secretary of state, thus became the first GOP candidate for chief executive to succeed his long-time friend, Governor Hanley. He has the active support of Hanley and the state GOP committee and there is little indication he will have more than token opposition for the nomination.

"Every man, woman and child in this nation has a definite stake in what happens between now and November," Parker told a Washington-Lincoln dinner gathering. "In a republic the people themselves must remain in control. They must make up their own minds."

Shortly before Parker announced, former GOP state chairman Alvin C. Cast of Kentland revealed he would enter the lieutenant governor race today by paying his $1,000 state convention assessment at the party's state headquarters here.

Cast's announcement was significant in that he was ousted from the chairmanship in 1957 when Hanley became governor in a move designed to eliminate leadership of the Republican administration of former Gov. George N. Craig, a factional foe of Hanley and former Sen. William E. Jenner.

Approached by Parkersites, Cast was approached about running for lieutenant governor by associates of Parker, in what was considered a move to restore party harmony in the Hoosier GOP at least during the 1960 election campaign.

Parker said the GOP is "the common man's party" and is committed to "a program of action and achievement."

He pictured the Democratic Party as one which offers "only more debts, more dissensions and more defeat."

"Present leaders of the Democratic Party are committed to spending and more spending," he said. "They are willing to endanger our country's economy, piling debt upon debt, and placing our children in fiscal bondage for many years to come."

But Parker warned that despite those tremendous assets, overconfidence and lack of sustained political effort could hurt the party.

Republican February jubilation could turn into a November nightmare if we permit ourselves to become self-satisfied," he said. Parker said the present Indiana Republican administration has given Hoosiers a balanced budget; an expanded highway program; improved mental health program; a reduced property tax; better schools; "unequaled" industrial development, and a far-sighted flood control program.

Three-Judge Panel Is Named In Case

A second panel of three judges was appointed this morning in the state vs. Jesse G. Niblick case by city judge Richard J. Sullivan.

Sullivan said today that William Small, Central Soya personnel manager and legal counsel, David Macklin, county attorney, and Mark A. Morin, local lawyer, agreed to sit on the panel, with one to be selected as judge in the case.

After Sullivan disqualified himself because he has Niblick as a client in another case, he appointed a panel of three lawyers two weeks ago. The defense struck one name, the prosecution another, with the intention of having the remaining attorney serve as special judge. The third lawyer, however, refused the appointment.

Statutes provide that another panel can be named in an effort to seat a judge on the case.

Niblick was arrested by the sheriff's department for failure to yield right of way in a highway accident a couple of months ago. Sullivan said that the prosecution will strike first and the defense second, with an announcement forthcoming on the appointment of the judge.

Adams County Rural Youth Club Honored

The Adams county rural youth club was one of four youth groups in the state honored this noon in Indianapolis by the Indiana farm-city committee with a "Good neighbor" award for outstanding achievement in bringing about a better understanding between rural and urban people in 1959.

The local club's entry was based on its public relations program, which included extensive touring and numerous news stories.

Eleven Hoosier service groups were honored today by the Indiana farm-city committee.

Recipients of the committee's first annual "Good neighbor" awards were announced at a luncheon meeting at the Washington hotel in Indianapolis attended by farm-city committee members and representatives of civic, labor, fraternal, business, agricultural and religious organizations from throughout the state.

Fort Wayne Chamber Award winners included the Fort Wayne Chamber of Commerce, the Spencer and Madison county farm bureaus, the rural-urban committees of Rush and Jefferson counties, and the service clubs arrangements committee of Whitley county.

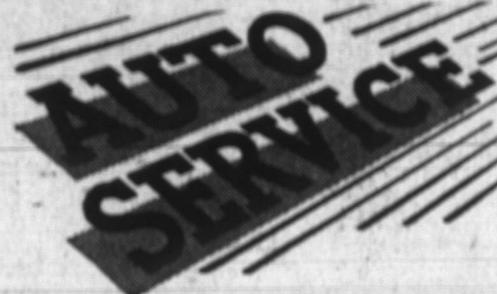

Four county rural youth clubs—Adams, Allen, Boone and DeKalb—were given awards in the youth category. A special award went to the Indiana watermelon festival at Vincennes "for bringing national attention to a quality Indiana agricultural product."

Winners were selected by an awards jury composed of Indiana farm, business, labor, religious and youth leaders. Some 40 different organizations submitted entries in the good neighbor awards competition.

The Fort Wayne Chamber of Commerce changed the name of its agriculture committee to "county relations" committee and adopted the goals of establishing closer rural-urban ties and emphasizing that America's free enterprise system is of paramount importance to both farmers and businessmen. The new committee participated in eight different rural-urban activities during 1959.
