

Urges Negroes Not To Use Retaliation

HOUSTON, Tex. (UPI) — An NAACP official today urged Negro citizens not to attack white residents in retaliation against the kidnaping and mutilation of a Negro man by four masked white men.

The plea came as police warned the situation was tense but they felt they could handle any incidents. A crude wooden cross was burned Tuesday night on the lawn of a Negro family, and dozens of Negroes called police saying they have received threatening telephone calls.

Francis L. Williams, a Houston attorney who is president of the local NAACP chapter, urged Negroes not to try and retaliate against whites.

"We urge that the Negro citizens of Houston do not take any positive act of retaliation or violence, and we shall depend on the appropriate law enforcement agencies to apprehend the persons who committed this act, so they may be brought to justice as all other persons accused of similar crimes," Williams said.

The act he spoke of was the assault of Felton Turner, 27.

Police said they had no new leads on the four young men who forced Turner into their car at gunpoint and took him to an isolated spot, flogged him with a chain and hanged him upside down in a tree after carving the initials "KKK" once on his chest and once again on his stomach.

Turner said his attackers told him they were hired to do the job because of the publicity Negro students from Texas Southern University were getting for sitting down at white lunch counters in the city.
