House Probers
Still Digging
Into Manuals

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The storm in Congress over an Air Force manual linking some churches with Communism appeared to be blowing itself out today in the wake of two congressional inquiries.

But House investigators were still digging into the subject of military manuals on other topics ranging from how to wash an officer's dog to bartending. They promised further disclosures later.

Everyone concerned with the church-and-Communism manual was agreed on one point: if on nothing else—somewhere along the line the Air Force goofed.

Air Force Secretary Dudley C. Sharp told a House armed-services subcommittee Thursday it was "inexcusable" that the passage about Communist infiltration of churches got into the manual.

In this view he had the backing of the National Council of Churches which stirred up the fuss by protesting bitterly against the manual, written for reserve non-commissioned officers.

But Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski (R-Wis.) told Sharp Thursday the allegation in the manual hadn't been disproved "one iota" and the Air Force had no business withdrawing it.

The armed forces subcommittee completed questioning Sharp; Gen. Thomas D. White, Air Force chief of staff, and other Air Force officials in two hours. It then adjourned for a few weeks.

Scores Safety Lack In Cities, Counties

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—Indiana cities and counties were accused today of failing to do their share toward holding down the Hoosier traffic death toll.

The charge was made by Robert J. Fink, administrative assistant to Governor Handley and chairman of the Governor's Traffic Safety Committee.

"State and federal highways, which are patrolled by state police, are showing a decrease in traffic fatalities," Fink said. "But fatalities in urban areas and on county roads are soaring."

State police Maj. Paul Beverford said traffic deaths in urban areas during the first two months of 1960 were up 42 percent over the corresponding period last year. At the same time, he said, rural fatalities were down more than five per cent.

Beverford said deaths on state and federal highways for the same period decreased 36 percent while traffic deaths on county road increased 67 per cent.

"If counties and cities do not shoulder their share of the load, we are going to top last year's death toll and there is no excuse for it," Fink said.

Fink said the 67 per cent increase in fatalities on county roads was "appalling."

"County officials are elected by the people and must accept their share of responsibility in the field of traffic safety," Fink said. "If they don't, perhaps the Legislature ought to step in and take some of the responsibility from them."

Fink said driver education apparently is not working and more drastic steps are in order.

"We have met with little or no success in the sugar-pill approach," Fink said. "Maybe it's time to take the sugar off and give them a bitter pill."

Fink said the answer to the problem apparently lies in more arrests and more driver suspensions for traffic violations.

"We have to shock motorists out of their apathy," he said.

Submit Plans To Carry Out Disarmament

PARIS (UPI)—The West will ask Russia to join in creation of an "International Disarmament Organization" (IDO) to carry out three-stage world disarmament, diplomatic sources said today.

The United States and its four Allies will present the proposal for the IDO next Tuesday when they meet the Soviet Union and four Communist bloc nations in Geneva for disarmament talks, the sources said.

The first step in the three-stage Western disarmament plan calls for creation of an international disarmament organization that would centralize information on the state of armaments and troop strength supplied by all signatories, according to informed sources.

Firm ceilings would be set for troop strengths of the United States and the Soviet Union, and each signatory to the pact would turn over to the IDO part of its armaments to be stockpiled and controlled by the IDO. Under the same provision all signatories would have to notify IDO before launching a space satellite.

Simultaneously with the application of these measures, East and West would seek further agreement on disarmament measures to go into effect during the second and third phases.

The second phase of the Western plan would include:

—An end to production of fissionable materials for military purposes.

—Conversion of military nuclear stockpiles to peaceful purposes, but only after a fool-proof control system has been found.

—Limitation of troop strength of the United States and the Soviet Union during the second stage to two million men each.

—A provision against launching of any space vehicles that could be used for military purposes.

The third stage calls for a conference of nations possessing large armies to discuss their reduction. Until calling of this conference, only the Soviet Union and the United States, for psychological purposes, would have been affected by troop limitations, because they are leaders of the East-West competition, informed sources said.

Also during the third and final stage, production of all nuclear armaments would be prohibited and military missiles would be destroyed.

Conventional armaments would be cut to a point needed by each nation to insure internal security and carry out obligations it would assume under the IDO charter.

The guests also included Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen (Ill.), Indiana Gov. Harold W. Handley and Lt. Gov. Crawford Parker; Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield; Commerce Secretary Fredrick E. Muelle and Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson.

Eisenhower was in a beaming, expansive mood as he spoke during a brief appearance at the dinner. Acknowledging that he was not from Indiana and in fact was born in Rayburn's congressional district, Eisenhower described himself as "just sort of a wanderer who dropped in."

"For me, during a session of Congress at least, every day's a Charlie Halleck day," he said.

The president said that Halleck, when given the responsibility for leading administration forces in the House, told him "this is going to cost me a lot of votes but I'll do it." Eisenhower said that "this kind of leadership" is "priceless."

The President said that "Charlie is doing a job for the United States" and not just for the Republican Party.

PAS-AS-YOU-SEE—All eyes are on Toronto, Canada, these days to see how a recently begun experiment in pay television works out. Sponsored by a movie firm, "Telemeter" provides three channels for its 2,000 subscribers. Two carry public service movies and news at no cost. The third shows movies currently playing at theaters—with no commercials or interruptions. Cost varies from 50 cents to $2, depending upon the event. The home viewer just deposits the money in the coin box attached to his set. The box then unscrambles the picture.

Rep. Chas. Halleck
Honored At Dinner

WASHINGTON (UPI)—President Eisenhower Thursday night hailed House Republican leader Charles A. Halleck for supporting the Eisenhower program even when it "cost" him votes back home in Indiana.

Eisenhower praised Halleck as "a very top flight, tough fighting little Hoosier." He made the remarks during a brief appearance at a dinner honoring Halleck as "1960 Hoosier of the Year."

The President also commended Democratic congressional leaders for their cooperation with the administration on foreign policy.

The dinner, sponsored by the Indiana Society of Washington, drew a crowd of more than 1,000 government officials, members of Congress, including speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.) and others.

Partisan politics was set aside for the evening. Close to 70 members of congress—Democrats and Republicans—were on hand to honor Halleck.

The guests also included Senate Republican leader Everett M. Dirksen (Ill.), Indiana Gov. Harold W. Handley and Lt. Gov. Crawford Parker; Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield; Commerce Secretary Fredrick E. Muelle and Agriculture Secretary Ezra T. Benson.

his sentiments.

Noting the presence of Benson and Indiana's propensity for producing corn, Halleck said he hoped that his brief remarks hadn't "added to Benson's burdensome surplus of that commodity."

The all-Indiana entertainment was supplied by Hoagy Carmichael, music composer who hails from Bloomington, Ind.; Herb Shriner, Hoosier humorist from Fort Wayne, and a mixed quartet from Indiana University.

Carmichael flew to Washington by jet plane from California to attend the dinner.
