New Bargaining

Approach By Union

WASHINGTON, D.C.—A national trade union today adopted a collective bargaining approach to automation and jobs for 1960 negotiations with the nation's electrical industry that is unprecedented in the American labor movement.

The United Electrical, Radio & Machine Workers of America (UE) put General Electric Co. and Westinghouse Corporation on notice that in their 1960 negotiations with the country's largest electrical manufacturers the union will insist that "no worker" from among the 57,000 employees represented by UE in the two electrical chains "shall receive less money or lose his job" because of automation or "any other technological change in production."

The UE emphasized that "each and every worker shall receive at a minimum a rate of pay equal to that received before any change is made on his or her specific job."

The 157,000-member union adopted this approach following a week-end meeting by the UE's General Electric-Westinghouse conference board attended by more than 150 delegates from General Electric and Westinghouse plants throughout the country.

The union's announced determination to reject all attempts to cut jobs and wages because of increased productivity was approved by the delegates for their 1960 negotiations with the electrical chains.

The UE approach is backed by the union's proposal which calls for adoption of a shorter work week with no reduction in pay.

"Today it is necessary for workers and their unions to base themselves unequivocally on the proposition that when a change is made which increases the productivity per worker (and the profit for the employer)," the UE stated, "no worker shall receive less money and no worker shall lose his job."

"The development of automation, the downgrading and reclassification of jobs and the combining of jobs through technological change have all led to greater production with fewer workers," the union said.

The UE charged that the electrical industry "has already put into motion a course of action which fundamentally undermines the level of living of working people and which reduces the number of jobs available to all people who must work for a living."

The UE stated that "the rapid increase in productivity with fewer workers requires that we redouble our efforts to achieve a shorter work week with no reduction in pay."

The union's announced refusal to accept loss of jobs and wage cuts because of productivity gains must be implemented through the shorter work week, it was stated, "if the fruits of the new technology are to be passed on to the common people of our country."

The union's GE-Westinghouse conference board also called for "substantial" wage increases, increased pension coverage, improved insurance benefits and the elimination of all practices that restrict employment by the two corporations because of a worker's race, creed, religion or marital status.

The 1960 negotiations with General Electric Co. and Westinghouse Corporation are the first full-scale contractual negotiations in five years between the companies and the union. UE's contract with GE terminates October 1, 1960 and negotiations begin August 1. Westinghouse contract terminates October 15, 1960 and contract talks open August 15.

All three were identified by small bits of flesh dug out of the steaming crater.

Out Our Way

Plan Memorial Services For Plane Victims

TELL CITY, Ind. (UPI)—Northwest Airlines planned to fly relatives here today to attend memorial services for 63 persons killed in the fiery crash of a Lockheed Electra airliner.

One plane, containing 48 relatives, will leave from Minneapolis, where the doomed flight began. Another will fly relatives from Chicago where the Miami-bound plane stopped for passengers.

Four caskets, representing the Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and Buddhist faiths of the passengers, will be used at the memorial service Wednesday.

The caskets will be placed in a 44 by 46 foot plot of ground at Tell City cemetery. A monument, perpetually decorated with flowers, will list names of those who died when the plane crashed Thursday.

No bodies have been found. The cause of the crash remained a mystery.

The nation's two top aviation officials, E.R. Quesada, administrator of the Federal Aviation Agency, and James R. Durfee, chairman of the Civil Aeronautics Board, made a surprise trip to Tell City Monday.

Durfee said officials were trying to determine whether the plane was the victim of metal fatigue, clear weather air turbulence or sabotage in the form of a bomb.

"I never saw a plane disintegrate as much as that one," Quesada said.

The officials flew by helicopter to the mud-slicked field where the fuselage of the plane dug a 30 foot deep crater when it plunged three miles to earth.

The buried wreckage was still burning as bulldozers and power shovels carefully dug into the crater.

Investigators were fearful of touching off a new explosion in the steaming hole. A CAB spokesman said magnesium parts of the plane and 1,000 to 1,400 gallons of high octane fuel which may be buried in the crater could possibly explode with the proper amount of air.

A huge crane that dipped into the crater came up with pieces of metal too hot to touch and clothing which was still on fire. The crane occasionally unearthed bits of bone.

National guardsmen and state troopers sifted the dirt for clues. Investigators then trucked the debris to Cannelton, Ind., for further analysis.

FBI agents made the first identification of victims Monday. The identified dead were Harold V. Snyder, Highland Park, Ill., John Bachner, South Bend, Ind., a Notre Dame student, both passengers, and Arnie Kowal, 40, Minneapolis, Minn., a flight engineer.

All three were identified by small bits of flesh dug out of the steaming crater.
