Bennett Cerf Lauds Work Of Newspaper

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The American people are reading more than ever before because of the work of newspapers, humorist and publisher Bennett Cerf said Friday.

Cerf told newsmen attending the 26th annual convention of the Hoosier State Press Assn. that newspapers are playing a key role, despite modern distractions.

But he said they "could do more" by running more news stories and features to help develop the reading habits of teenagers. He also credited radio, television and movies with making more confirmed readers by improving literary tastes.

Other speakers at the opening session of the two-day meeting were Franklin D. Schurz, publisher of the South Bend Tribune, and Alfred Friendly, managing editor of the Washington Post and Times Herald.

Schurz discussed newspaper mechanical developments expected during the next 25 years.

He told newsmen that readers within a few years should be getting a better product.

Schurz said readers could expect more up-to-the-minute news as the result of the perfection of a new technique called "cold type" printing.

Application of the cold type, or photographic, processes to the newspaper printing field will help publishers with one of their most vital problems — rising costs, Schurz said.

Police broke up a fiery demonstration early Friday and routed 100 male students marching in front of Smithwood Hall, a women's dormitory. Officers said the students sang "segregation songs."

A cross was burned on the lawn of the Alpha Phi Sorority house. Students theorized the cross-burning stemmed from the mistaken belief that Alpha Phi had a small turnout for the election.

Student leaders said Smithwood Hall co-ed voted 388-372 in favor of Atkins, a junior majoring in government.

Kennedy In Belated Appearance At Rally

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI) — Sen. John F. Kennedy left Indiana early today for an Arizona campaign tour after a belated appearance at a South Bend rally.

Kennedy started a two-day campaign in Indiana on behalf of his presidential hopes Thursday but cut it short to return to Washington and a civil rights bill vote in the Senate.

Rep. John Brademas (D-Ind.) had been counting on Kennedy to address a $15-a-plate dinner on behalf of his re-election campaign Friday night in South Bend.

The 1,000 guests at their dinners and listened to other political speeches until about 10:15 p. m. c.s.t. when Kennedy arrived by plane and told his patient audience that "if you think I am going to write a farm program tonight, you are mistaken."

Kennedy said he felt state presidential preference primaries are of major importance because they give the people a chance to vote for the nation's chief executive.

He regretted that another Democratic primary — Sen. Stuart Symington — did not compete against him in the Hoosier primary May 3.

Kennedy promised he would try to re-schedule his interrupted 3rd district tour later.

Kennedy did not stay overnight but returned to his plane and left at 1 a. m. for Arizona.

SHADES OF CORDELL HULL — Spring brings out the friendliness in most everyone, and one of the joys of the warm weather (if it ever gets here) is to chat in the back yard with neighbors.

Gerry Timmons and his neighbor in Berne, Gilbert Stucky, were willing away some of the warmer evening moments last week.

Stucky had the hedge clippers with him, and while the pair talked, he proceeded to trim up the grape arbor. When darkness fell, the two men went back into their homes, and Stucky proudly told his wife that he had finally trimmed up that old arbor at the side of the garage.

Mrs. Stucky looked puzzled, and informed her husband that they hadn't had any grape vines in the back yard for five years. Gilbert realized what had happened, and hurried over to the Timmons' home to apologize to Gerry for cutting the Timmons' grape vines.

Gerry assured him that it was perfectly alright, as he had wanted to trim the arbor for a couple of years, but didn't know how to do it himself.

us who live here to notice it, things do change around Decatur. Mike Kohne, who has been away from Decatur about two years in the army, decided to spend some of his leave reading. He went into the library, and naturally went upstairs. He noticed the changes, but didn't think too much about it, and headed for the card file.

After looking through it a couple of times, Mike was asked by the librarian if she could help him. He said he couldn't find anything on the subject he was looking for. The children's librarian recognized Mike, and explained the new (to him) setup at the local Carnegie.

Mike made his apologies and went downstairs, an innocent victim of progress in Decatur.

DEAR FEATHERED FRIENDS I hope my friends control their shock

In case they see me, armed with a rock.

Sneak around the shrubbery end intent on bombing feathered friend.

It's not that I dislike the birds, in fact, I love their tuneful words

That float on sunny morning breeze

And mingle with the rustling trees. And still, it fills my heart with fire.

Accentuates this Scotchman's ire. To see the little rascals feed

On costly, newly-planted seed. I broadcast crumbs and suet and such

To try to help them out this much. Yet they ignore such mundane rot

And concentrate on brands by Scott.

Perjury Is Charged To Former Judge

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Former Marion Superior Judge Norman E. Brennan today faced perjury charges in connection with his handling of a divorce case as an attorney.

The charges were filed in Marion Criminal Court here in an affidavit signed by Claude Cade, Indianapolis, former husband of Mrs. Mona Cade Ingram. Cade alleges that Brennan induced Mrs. Ingram to lie in court about fees she allegedly paid Brennan to handle her divorce.

Brennan was jailed two months ago by Superior Judge Robert Robb for his actions in the case, but Brennan later obtained his release. A Marion County grand jury which met March 29 did not mention Brennan in its report.

Brennan, who faces a 1-10 year prison term if convicted, is alleged to have coached Mrs. Ingram to give false testimony.

Stern Criticism By U.S. Against Cuba

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Stern new U. S. criticism of Cuban Premier Fidel Castro's regime today was viewed as evidence of increased concern over Communist infiltration.

The United States Friday charged Castro and other Cuban officials of a "betrayal" of the ideals of the revolution which catapulted the regime to power 15 months ago.

The charge was made in a letter to the Federation of Students of Chile, written on orders from President Eisenhower but sent over the signature of U. S. Ambassador in Santiago, William Howe.

Secretary of State Christian A. Herter, at a news conference Friday, said the United States was "disturbed" over recent attacks on anti-Communists in Cuba. He said the Cuban press, apparently supported by Castro officials, had labeled anti-Communists as "anti-Castro" and "anti-revolution."

Herter viewed the statements as a deliberate attempt to discourage any anti-Communist sentiments. His stand was seen as indicating new U. S. concern over the leftwing drift of the Castro government.
