Patent Leather
When today's mothers and grandmothers were children, they rubbed castor oil or petroleum jelly on their patent leather shoes to keep them from cracking. Done twice a month, this is still a good treatment.

Here's a cabin that's ideal for the family that loves fishing and water sports. The man of the house can build it himself, using big sheets of fir plywood, from easy-to-follow plans.

Water - Lovers Will Go For This Cabin Design

Families that love fishing and water sports will feel right at home in this attractive, low-cost leisure home. The man of the house can build it himself, and then catch fish right from his own front porch. Materials for this unique, well-arranged cabin will run about $2500.

Included in its 400 square feet of covered area are carefully designed sleeping, cooking, social and bath area, plus a spacious front deck. The structure is built on concrete pilings, which probably should be poured by an expert.

A floating dock lies right beside the cabin and a hinged, floating ramp takes you to your boat, which rises and falls with the water level. An extension of the cabin covers the boat slip, which is spacious enough to accommodate a boat with a beam of six feet.

Ideal Eating Spot

Nearly 300 square feet of deck, part of it shaded by the overhang from the roof, make an ideal spot for outdoor eating, for fishing from the comfort of a rocking chair, or for simply soaking up the sun. Skin-diving enthusiasts can use it as a home base, too, and it's a convenient stop for water-borne guests. This vacation home is easily expandable, and is designed to be built almost entirely from 4x8-foot sheets of fir plywood. All the plywood used is exterior type, made with a fully waterproof glue. The big sheets go together quickly and greatly simplify construction.

Material costs can be cut with alternate materials, all carefully detailed in the easy-to-follow plans available for 25 cents from the Douglas Fir Plywood Association, Tacoma 2, Wash. Ask for the Homarina.

A catalog showing other cabin plans in full color is available for 10 cents from the same address.

POPULAR IDEA

Oregon officials estimate that approximately 1800 leisure cabins were built in the Mount Hood area in 1959 alone.

There's plenty of space and plenty of economy in this water-side cabin. Big sheets of fir plywood make construction fast.

Old Refrigerator Can't Serve You Like A New One

How long has it been since you rode in a rumble seat, or danced the Big Apple, or wore rayon stockings?

Your refrigerator may be almost as out of date as rayon stockings if it is more than five years old. New electric refrigerator-freezers have so many modern time and labor-saving features that most older refrigerators are outmoded even if they seem to be operating satisfactorily.

Here's how to tell if your refrigerator is out of date. Does it: Keep fresh foods crisp and fresh for a week or more?

Hold many pounds of frozen foods in a zero zone for months? Save shopping time because of its large capacity?

Have a special compartment for cheese and another that keeps butter at spreading temperature?

Hold up to a bushel of fresh vegetables in specially cooled and humidified crispers?

Remain completely free of frost so you never have that messy defrosting job even in the freezer section? Automatically keep a basket full of ice cubes?

into the lawn with sharp tight turns, or step on his wife's prize asters.

The garden area in the immediate vicinity of the border should be checked for pebbles and branches and raked clean.

Frequently, power mower trimming along sidewalks and flagstone paths is impeded by the fact that the stone or concrete is set above the natural contour line of the lawn.

Here, landscape experts suggest that the low areas of lawn, paralleling sidewalks can be built up with topsoil, tamped firm and seeded to insure even, easy trimming.

Turf around trees and shrubs should be treated similarly to insure that the grading is firm and designed so the rotary power mower can trim it neatly and uniformly with a single, circular cut.

"HOME of HOMES"

Every home garden wants his lawn to be "special." In laying out the lawn, placing flagstone walks, garden paths, planting beds and foundation shrubs the gardener should consider if these things will interfere with routine mowing. There's a proper place for all of them, one that doesn't make mowing a delicate chore.

Today's brand name rotary power mowers have been designed to perform efficiently and with rewarding results on all types of grass. That is, if you are mowing correctly.

Edging with a power mower has been a challenge to many home gardeners who end up with scalped areas, shredded annuals and dirt and stones scattered on the lawn along flower beds.

The border of any well groomed lawn should be prepared for mowing with a rotary mower. Experts suggest that the home gardener consider this when planting his annuals; laying a flagstone path or seeding a narrow border.

The edges, as well as any other irregular surface, should be tamped gently to eliminate any peaked areas that invite scalping. The plantings should be set back far enough from the border so the mower can cut with enough width to insure a clean, neatly trimmed border.

A common problem in mowing lawns that feature varied border patterns is that little—if any—allowance has been made for the stepping and turning room of the operator.

If a garden path requires two trips with the mower—up and back—then the gardener should figure out how much maneuvering space he needs so that he doesn't cut
