

Time, Talent, and Teachers

While revolutionary changes in the organization of school districts proceed in Indiana, a greater revolution in teaching methods is also taking place.

Most of us went to school when the only instructional aide a teacher needed was his jawbone and a blackboard. A few can still remember when a switch was part of the classroom tool kit.

Today, film strips, movies with sound and in color, and slides are a common part of the teacher's modern equipment. Television is growing as a teacher's aide. Electronic-tape machines are often used right here in Adams county.

Good teaching aides are not a substitute for good teachers—rather, they amplify good teaching into excellent.

We all know there is a shortage of good, experienced teachers. It is due primarily to the population boom—43 million in school in the U.S. today, compared with 29 million ten years ago.

A new category of school employee has been born from the need to relieve good teachers of the mass of detail and routine which clutters up the teaching function—taking attendance, keeping grade books, class health records, collecting fees, ordering supplies, mimeographing tests and exercises, looking after emergency health problems like nosebleeds, and grading papers. In many school systems throughout the country, teacher aides are hired to lift the housekeeping, bookkeeping and paper correcting duties from the teaching specialists. You might as well ask a surgeon to roll his own bandages as ask an expert teacher to spend from one-fifth to two-thirds of his time in nonprofessional tasks.

Many new schools recognize that no one teacher is an expert in every phase of any one subject. So teaching teams are organized.

In Evanston, Ill., the 350 juniors get the advantage of having every aspect of the English course presented by the teacher most competent to do it. Thus one teacher who majored in creative and expository writing teaches that branch; Ned Hoopes teaches the novel and poetry, and keeps the class on the edge of their seats; David Perry combines his skill with the novel with a first-rate command of grammar; and Malcolm Mosing is strong in speech and drama.

Twice a week all the students gather for a large lecture; the rest of the week they meet with regular teachers for discussion in classes of 20 to 25. But the division of labor permits all the students to get the best from each teacher. This raises tremendously the total quality of the course.

Many, many different varieties of teaching are now possible in the large school districts, where specialists are hired to provide space-age education. Will Adams county advance into the future with well-educated youngsters adjusted to the modern age, or just provide unskilled persons for the dwindling manual labor field? The choice is ours.

Schedule Activities For Indiana Alumni

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — A weekend full of activities faces returning Indiana University alumni starting Friday, June 3, winding up with commencement at 10 a.m. Monday in Memorial Stadium.

Max Freedman, correspondent for The Guardian of Manchester, England, will address the annual banquet of alumni of the college of arts and sciences and the graduate school at 5:30 p.m. Friday, followed by the first of two alumni institute lectures on "The Impact of Science on Our Civilization." At the dinner, a portrait of S.E. Stout, dean emeritus of the college will be unveiled.

First institute speakers will be N. R. Hanson, chairman, and E. E. Grant, faculty member, of the new department of history and logic of science.

While ballots for election of an alumnus member of the board of trustees are being counted Saturday morning, the second institute session will be held at 9:30 a.m. featuring Hermann J. Muller, distinguished service professor of zoology; J. Konopinski, professor of physics; Philip Appelman, assistant professor of English, and C. L. Schutze, lecturer in economics.

The commencement barbecue will be at noon near the Well house. In the early afternoon and evening will be a reception for the basketball team of 1920, one for journalism graduates and reunion dinners of the Emeritus club and classes of 1910, '15, '20, '35, '50 and '55.

At 8:30 p.m., Saturday in the Union Building, George F. Krueger, associate professor of choral music, will direct the Singing Hoosiers and Hoosier Queens in their last program before departing for an eight-week USO tour of Europe.

At 8:30 a.m. Sunday will be the alumnae-senior women's breakfast and at 12:15 p.m., Sunday will be the alumni awards luncheon and induction of the class of 1910 into the Emeritus club.

Sunday evening, banquets will be held by alumni of the schools of law, music and education.

Baccalaureate will be held in the auditorium at 8:30 p.m. The speaker will be the Rev. Arthur Miller, 1922 graduate, who is moderator of the United Presbyterian church in the U.S.A.
