Democratic State News

Ambitious plans to upset the nomination of front-runner Matthew E. Welsh for governor were reported this weekend to be maturing.

The main objective of the "coup d'etat" was hatched in the state office of appellate court judge John S. Gonias, according to reports.

A coalition of John Walsh, Nelson Grills, and Albert Steinwedel forces, according to the reported plan, will put up a team of dark horses if the going looks too rough for them just before the convention deadline.

Roger Branigan and Paul Butler are the dark horses mentioned. The idea is, whoever does not get nominated for governor in 1960 will be assured the nomination for senator in 1962.

With either Branigan or Butler as the Democratic nominee for governor, the rest of the ticket would look like this:

Lieutenant-Governor — Steinwedel.

Supreme court judge — Walsh.

Attorney-General — Grills.

Mayor Ralph Tucker was believed in on the plot, also. He is to become chairman of the Indiana toll road commission if the ticket wins. Many of the other long-range details have not yet leaked out.

For one thing, William G. Moss, of Bloomington, who is a candidate for secretary of state, and reported to be among the plotters, apparently did not get a definite assignment in the reported plan. Moss has been an ardent supporter of Walsh for governor, and hoped to be nominated with him on the ticket.

Many old-line party workers, with no particular axe to grind, hearing of the planned coup, were of the opinion that neither Walsh nor Steinwedel would agree to this until too late. Both have already paid a $2,500 declaration fee to the Democratic state committee to run for governor.

Most of Adams county's delegation is believed to support Walsh and Steinwedel, but whether would stick by a Butler or Branigan ticket would depend on the county central committee's ideas. The Adams county group opposes generally the rest of the fourth district, which supports Matt Welsh.

Earlier in the campaign an anonymous letter purporting to show a similar arrangement of Welsh supporters was mailed to various county chairmen and officials.

Only the convention itself will tell the actual story, but undoubtedly many of the reported coalitions now existing can be traced back to previous convention promises and broken promises.
