Seizes Sword From Scabbard Of Congo King

LEOPOLDVILLE, Belgian Congo (UPI)—An African nationalist demonstrator snatched King Baudouin's sword from its scabbard at his side today. The demonstrator was quickly overpowered by security officers who at first feared an assassination attempt on the Belgian monarch.

The demonstrator was not immediately identified.

He snatched the king's ceremonial sword as the young bachelor monarch was riding in triumph from Ndjili airfield to Leopoldville where he will attend Thursday's independence day ceremonies.

Shouting "Independence," the demonstrator — who apparently was unarmed — pounced from the crowd lining the road into town. He landed on the king's slow-moving open automobile.

Just as the car reached the city limits, the man ripped the sword from the King's belt, unsheathed it and waved it around, repeating "Independence! Independence!"

Steel-helmeted riot police who lined the route dived on top of the demonstrator and fought with him for several seconds before they knocked him to the ground.

Just previously, Belgium had concluded a friendship, assistance and mutual cooperation pact with this colonial land designed to keep the Congo's huge reservoir of mineral wealth and manpower in the Western camp after it achieves independence.

Withhold Details Of Binkley Will

HARTFORD CITY, Ind. (UPI)—An attorney for Charles (Coot) Binkley, who died as he was on the verge of becoming a millionaire, said today the elderly hooded horse trainer left a will.

But Nelson Hayhurst, Fresno, Calif., attorney, here to attend today's funeral services for Binkley, said contents of the will will not be made public until the document is probated.

Hayhurst said the question of where the will should be probated also remained to be settled. Apparently, attorneys for the 75-year-old retired glassblower may probate the document either in California or Indiana.

Binkley owned property in Montpelier for which Hartford City is the county seat. He also was awarded half of the estate of the late Cora Nidever, Fresno, Calif., estimated variously at between $3 and $5 million dollars. The award was made in December, 1958, by a Fresno jury and upheld last month by a California appeals court.

The nieces and nephews of the nieces and nephews of Mrs. Nidever, who are protesting the award, have until July 5 to file a further appeal with the California Supreme Court.

Hayhurst told newsmen the will was drawn up shortly after the Fresno court decision and the document now is in California.

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI)—Robert Skinner, 42, Indianapolis, was indicted on first degree murder charges in the gun death of his wife, Thelma, Tuesday by the third Marion county grand jury to investigate the case.

Skinner claimed that the fatal shooting Nov. 5, 1957, in their suburban home was accidental.

The first grand jury to investigate the shooting failed to return any indictment. The second jury returned a manslaughter indictment.

Fort Wayne Banker Enters Guilty Plea

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI)—An employee of the Lincoln National Bank & Trust Co. pleaded guilty to charges of embezzlement Tuesday.

Federal Judge Robert A. Grant ordered a pre-sentence investigation after Ralph W. Shimer, 36, signed a statement that he rigged the accounts of a client to embezzle $22,300.

Grant indicated he would pass sentence next month.

Enters Guilty Plea To Embezzlement

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (UPI)—Jerry Allen Hensel, 30, Huntington, today faced sentencing following his guilty plea to five counts of embezzlement from the First National Bank at Huntington.

Hensel, formerly the bank's assistant cashier and teller, entered the plea Tuesday before Federal Judge Robert A. Grant. Officials said less than $100 in deposits was involved.

Grant set sentencing for July 19.

In another case, Grant suspended a $500 fine when John Good, LaGrange, agreed to pay court costs after he pleaded guilty to transporting a herd of cattle which was quarantined for brucellosis across the state line from Michigan.

Kelly Will Mingles Advice With Wit

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—In death, as in life, millionaire sportsman John B. Kelly continued to call them as he saw them.

In his will filed for probate Tuesday, the father of Princess Grace of Monaco intermingled sound advice with sparkling wit, hurled an impish barb at the conventional legalities of final testaments and concluded it with his signature in green ink.

"I have written this will in a lighter vein because I have always felt that wills were so dreary that they might have been written by the author of 'Inner Sanctum,'" Kelly wrote.

The former Olympic sculling champion, who built a mighty contracting empire after starting out as a bricklayer, died June 20 of cancer. He was buried last Friday.

He said he wrote the will in his own words and had permitted his family to read it before his death. "I can think of nothing more gaudy than the heirs sitting around listening to some representative reading a will," Kelly said. "They always remind me of buzzards and vultures awaiting the last breath of the stricken."

Except for minor bequests he left one-third of his estate, estimated for probate at upwards of $500,000, to his wife, Margaret, and the remainder to be divided equally to the four children who he referred to as "Kell, Baba, Grace and Liz."

"Kids will be called 'kids' and not 'issue,'" Kelly wrote in dispensing with the legal terminology. "And it will not be cluttered up with 'parties of the first part,' 'per stirpes,' 'perpetuities,' 'usufrudicial,' 'to wit' and a lot of other terms that I am sure are only used to confuse those for whose benefit it was written."

He stipulated that his sons-in-law were not to share in the inheritances after the daughters die, but then added "I don't want to give the impression that I am against sons-in-law."

"If they are the right type," he wrote, "they will provide for themselves and their families and what I am able to give my daughters will help pay the dress shop bills which, if they continue as they have started out, under the able tutelage of their mother, will be quite considerable."
