Dog Poisoner In Town

A report has been made to the Decatur Daily Democrat that someone has poisoned a pet dog here in town.

This is a regrettable occurrence in any family. A pet, raised, and tenderly nourished by the entire family, is a joy and a part of life to every youngster. To have that pet cruelly murdered is quite a shock.

However, sometimes the fault does not all lie with the poisoner. Perhaps the culprit felt that he had ample cause.

Not everyone cares to raise dogs or cats. Some pride themselves on well-kept lawns, beautiful flowers, or shrubbery. Picture the feelings of a man or woman who devotes hours and hours each day to his property, only to have a dog or cat come by and tear up the flower bed, and damage the trees and shrubs.

Pet owners are responsible for their animals, which must be licensed and kept at home by fence or leash. No one would think of allowing a young child with no sense of respect for property or its own life to roam at large; neither should they allow their pets to roam at large.

The problem is one of two-fold extremes. Dogs should not be allowed to roam. Neighbors should not resort to poison. Pet owners should fence their yards, and allow their dogs the same freedom they allow their children—a freedom that is restricted by their learning and experience of the child or pet.

And those who are bothered by dogs, if they desire beautiful lawns and flower beds, may fence in their own yards, or call the police and report stray pets.

But malicious harm to the property of others, either by poison or by allowing pets to roam, can cause ill feelings between neighbors. It should not be allowed to do this. If you have either problem, take the initiative yourself, and take which either course you desire. But do not try to make two wrongs cause a right. It may temporarily ease your besieged and embittered mind, but it will cause only more problems in the long-run.

Kindness to the pets, or to the property and hobbies of others, is a must in society which, as its population increases, grows closer and closer together. We must learn to get along with others, or become outcasts of society.

Taking the law into your own hands to satisfy the wrong which you believe done to you will not solve the problem, but compound it.

Banks Are Largest Lenders To Farmers

Indiana banks were serving farmers with 14 per cent more production credit than a year previous on January 1 of this year, according to T. F. Graliker, president of the First State Bank of Decatur, who represents the Indiana bankers association as Adams county agricultural key banker. During 1959, the state's banks maintained their leadership in farm credit services.

Based on the 19th annual farm lending summary of the agricultural commission of the American bankers association, Graliker reported that "at the beginning of the year, Indiana bankers were supply farmers with 63 per cent of the production credit provided by institutional lenders. Total bank credit to the state's farmers stood at $205-million, 11 per cent more than a year previous. The total included $133-million in production loans and $72-million in farm mortgages. At the same time, $138-million in farm loans were held by insurance companies; $73-million by Federal Land Banks; $67-million by Production Credit Associations; and $21-million by the Farmers Home Administration."

Graliker reports that "more and more, the banks in Indiana find that farmers need a new type of credit to help finance farm capital requirements. To meet this changing need, an increasing amount of farm credit from Indiana banks is on an intermediate-term repayment basis.

"Intermediate-term loans are most frequently needed for farm machinery and equipment, livestock, soil improvements, additional land, and refinancing short-term notes. Over one-half of all bank farm mortgage loans are used to finance these intermediate-type capital expenses.

"As a further service to help farmers improve their operations, about one-third of all other bank farm loans have a repayment program longer than one year. Banks serve farmers with far more intermediate-term credit than any other group of lenders."

Graliker believes that "farmers and bankers working together in this way help make Indiana agriculture more prosperous." He reported that 99 per cent of the insured commercial banks in Indiana are serving farmers with agricultural loans.

Leading Cubans In Political Exile

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign Editor

The man-of-the-week: Jose Miro Cardona, former Cuban ambassador-designate to the United States. The place: Havana.

The quote: "The ideological divergencies between the policies of the government and my conscience are already insoluble."

Having thus penned his letter of resignation as Cuba's ambassador to the United States and another resigning as professor of criminal law at Havana University, Dr. Jose Miro Cardona made his way past Cuban policemen outside the Argentine embassy and at 7:35 a.m. on Tuesday joined another distinguished fellow countryman in political exile.

The other man was Sergio Rojas Santamarina, former Cuban ambassador to Britain, who on June 28 sought asylum in the same embassy.

Both men had been dedicated revolutionaries against the Batista dictatorship, but neither now was able to stomach the dictatorship of Fidel Castro nor stomach Cuba's swift passage into the Communist orbit.

Rojas had called the Cuban government "in its present form definitely Communist."

Miro Cardona's defection probably was the most damaging yet to Castro's prestige.

Miro Cardona had been the Castro regime's first prime minister, resigning without rancor when he found he could not effectively fill his office when policies were being changed minute-to-minute by Castro at the television microphone.

Miro Cardona was, in addition, one of Cuba's most outstanding lawyers and had been dean of Havana University's law school.

His resignation was one more evidence of the stresses within the Castro government, and, for Latin American nations who have viewed with detachment if not with sympathy Castro's assaults against the United States, further proof that Castro long ago had deserted the ideals of the revolution for which Miro Cardona and others had fought.
