Herter and other U.S. officials on the future of his strife-torn young nation.

After receiving a 19-gun salute, Lumumba said in an airport speech: "We wish the Republic of Congo to be unified, strong and prosperous. We desire true democracy in our country."

Then he added he was "confident we will find in the United States the aid we desire."

He said he wanted to "dissipate all misunderstanding" and make clear, his month - old country wants "cordial and correct relations with all democratic countries."

Referring to the Congo disorders, now being quelled by the United Nations, Lumumba said, "The recent happy events which you all know about were not our fault."

Lumumba was greeted by Herter who told him his talks here would bring "increasingly close and beneficial" U.S. ties with the Congo. Herter scheduled a mid-afternoon conference with Lumumba.

Lumumba said that if the United States or other countries send technicians to the Congo they will be "cordially welcomed."

Lumumba made no reference to Belgium. Nor did he mention his past overtures to accept Soviet aid.

Congo Finance Minister Pascal Nkanyi appealed to Leopoldville Tuesday for money and doctors to prevent the new nation from going under.

State Department spokesman Lincoln White indicated the United States was ready to give assistance to the Congo as soon as the United Nations indicated what kind of aid was needed. A U. N. police force is trying to restore order in the chaotic country.
