

Bitter Khrushchev Tirade In U. N.

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — Nikita S. Khrushchev, a hard loser, began winding up his mission to the United Nations today, admitting defeat in such a blaze of anger that his aides had to tone down the official translation of some of his remarks.

By turns irate and bitter, vulgar and vituperative in his statements to the U.N. General Assembly Tuesday, the 66-year-old Premier seemed worn and tired as he reached his embassy on Park Avenue Tuesday night for one last defiant stand.

Russia will "compete" in armaments, he said, a postscript to his remarks that it is turning out rockets "like sausages."

He had been beaten in his efforts to bring the disarmament issue directly to the floor of the United Nations. The vote was smashing — 62-12 with 25 abstentions in favor of sending it to committee first.

Khrushchev, who turns his emotions on and off as he sees fit, turned to the newsmen and said in a flat voice:

"Those that support the U.S. position can certainly celebrate a victory. They have put off once again a decision on disarmament and come closer to the possibility of war."

Aides hastily ran out afterward to correct the record. He did not say war, they said, please make it read, "closer to a catastrophe."

They added on the phrase "then there will be no war" if there is disarmament. Khrushchev himself had not said that.

Khrushchev's Chance Fades

But whatever his words, Khrushchev was a bitter man as he saw his last chance in this assembly go glimmering, just two days before his scheduled return home to Moscow.

He rose to address the assembly in the afternoon session and called, as expected, for a meeting of heads of governments next March or April to discuss "general and complete" disarmament. The American election, he said, made discussion now fruitless.

U.S. Ambassador James J. Wadsworth had told newsmen the United States might quit the United Nations if Red China wins admission. Khrushchev brushed off Wadsworth in a 22-minute harangue in which he said he could not pronounce the American's name.

Replies to the Russian, Wadsworth said he could pronounce Khrushchev's name all right. And in unemotional tones he said:

"If the intervention we have just heard from the representative of the Soviet Union is typical of what he would have to say in a disarmament debate, that is all the more reason it should not be held in this chamber."

Shouts Vulgar Words

Khrushchev was white-faced, shouting. The veins stood out on his head as he spewed out intemperate, often vulgar words.

In his 139-minute speech Sept. 23, Khrushchev had waxed bitter, occasionally he had pounded the table to express disapproval. He had shouted at British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan. But

Nikita Liner Clamped Under Full Security

NEW YORK (UPI) — Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev's liner Baltika was clamped under full security today to prevent any of the 190 seamen aboard from following the example of shipmate Viktor Jaanimets, who defected to freedom.

Late Tuesday the 29-year-old Estonian, who called Khrushchev a "tyrant" and condemned Communism's enslavement of his homeland, turned his back on two Russian embassy officials when they sought to persuade him to return to his ship.

"I will not talk to you," Jaanimets said. Later, at a news conference, he said the Russian officials "asked me whether I was forced (to defect) and I told them no—I had made my decision a long time ago."

The Russian officials from the embassy in Washington, Viktor Ossitov and Valeri Kravchenko, flew here Tuesday after it was revealed Jaanimets eluded four other seamen from the ship that brought Khrushchev here and sought political asylum Monday afternoon.

The rest of the crew was under tight security today, to keep others from defecting before the Baltika leaves Friday for Russia. Khrushchev is flying home to Moscow Thursday night.

Jaanimets' status here was believed to be under top-level consideration in Washington because of its nature. It in effect involved the defection of a member of Khrushchev's official party.

Jaanimets could be allowed to remain here under a "parolee" status, the same classification given about 42,000 Hungarian freedom fighter refugees who came to the United States in late 1956. More recently, Cubans fleeing Premier Fidel Castro's regime have been admitted as "parolees."

Ex-Convict, Girl Companion Sought

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A 21-year-old ex-convict from Indianapolis and his girl companion, wanted in a murder investigation in Indiana, were prime suspects today in a double slaying at Keokuk, Iowa, Monday night.

Keokuk police said Michael Walton Layton, missing suspect in the holdup slaying of an Indianapolis service station attendant, and his girl friend Nancy Fordyce, 19, fit the description of a couple who are believed to have killed a rooming house owner and his companion.

Willard Woodring, 42, Keokuk, and Richard G. Buchanan, 42, Geneseo, Ill., were shot and killed during a robbery at Woodring's rooming house.

The Marion County sheriff's office here said the description of the slayer fit Layton, except Layton has light hair and the holdup man had dark hair. But they said he may have dyed his hair in an attempt at disguise.

They said a picture of Layton has been forwarded to Keokuk for possible identification by four girls who were with Woodring and Buchanan when they were killed.

Keokuk police said a young couple fitting the description of Layton and Miss Fordyce knocked at the door of the rooming house and were admitted. They said the man pulled a gun and locked three of the four girls in a room, then forced Woodring, Buchanan and another girl into the kitchen where their hands and feet were taped. They said Woodring broke loose and was shot in the head and chest as he tried to take the gun away from the holdup man. Buchanan also was shot in the head as he tried to escape, but the woman was unharmed.

The holdup man and his girl companion fled with $200, but $44,000 hidden in Woodring's car was overlooked.

Layton is wanted here for the Sept. 22 slaying of Orville Lee Gambrel during a robbery at Gambrel's Indianapolis service station. Layton last was seen Sept. 29 in Bloomfield, Ind., at the home of relatives of Miss Fordyce who were out of town.

Each evening over 4,500 copies are printed of the Decatur Daily Democrat.

Argentine President Warns Of Conspiracy

ARGENTINA PRESIDENT

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — President Arturo Frondizi warned Argentina in a dramatic nationwide radio broadcast today that a conspiracy is afoot to overthrow his government. But he said he would not take sides.

Frondizi denounced the demands being made by a "tiny" segment of the populace.

"I shall not resign under any circumstances," he said.

He said he would fight to defend his government with every constitutional means at his disposal.

Frondizi again outlined his government's program "to carry the country forward," and stressed that "we must promote the collaboration of foreign capital to secure our development."

The impetus of the move against Frondizi's government is believed to come from a group of dissident army generals, who have demanded at least a partial reorganization of the cabinet to cleanse it of remaining links with communism and Paronism, as well as abandonment of "pro-foreign" economic policies. The navy has lined up with Frondizi, while the air force still had not taken sides.
