Grand Duchess Olga Buried In Canada

TORONTO (UPI)—They buried imperial Russia in tears Wednesday.

It was a day of sadness for the remnants of Russia's emigres who attended the burial of Grand Duchess Olga, the last of the shattered house of Romanoff, who died in a friend's home last week at the age of 79.

Bluebloods and peasants fought tears as the coffin of the daughter of Czar Alexander III was lowered into its grave sprinkled with Russian soil.

Crying men hugged each other in mutual consolation.

A dozen former imperial guardsmen, once dashing cadets but now well past their 60s, braced their shrunken figures to attention while two Union Jacks dipped to the bugle strains of the last post.

The funeral was for Olga, but to the 500-odd White Russians who attended it, it also was the funeral of an era that had been their way of life.

Olga took with her to the grave the last link with the Romanoff czars, a dynasty which was born out of chaos and which ended in chaos, but which during its three centuries of rule carved out modern Russia.

Canterbury Bishop On Historic Visit

ROME (UPI)—The Anglican archbishop of Canterbury arrived today on an historic visit during which he will meet in the audience of "friendship and courtesy" with Pope John XXIII.

Dr. Geoffrey Fisher, dressed in his flowing purple robes as primate of the Church of England, flew in from Istanbul and a tour of the Holy Land for his visit Friday—at the Vatican—with the Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church.

It will be the first meeting between the spiritual leaders of the two religions since the Protestant Reformation 400 years ago.

The last archbishop of Canterbury to visit a Roman Pope, Lord Arundel in 1397, was a pre-Reformation Catholic.

Dr. Fisher said on his arrival: "This is the first occasion on which an archbishop of Canterbury has visited Rome officially since the 14th century. Therefore, although it is a quite unspectacular event, it is also an historical one."

"This is part of a three-fold visit. Last week, I went to Jerusalem to the Holy City as a pilgrim. There I was received by fellow Christians of every denomination — as a fellow disciple of Christ."

"I found there a great sense of Christian unity in all communities. Therefore, from the East, the cradle of Christian faith, I have come to the West to Rome to visit the head of the whole Christian community. I look forward with great interest and delight to conversations with his Holiness the Pope."

Each evening over 4,000 copies are printed of the Decatur Daily Democrat.
