There Ain't No Such Animal

One of the juiciest propaganda phrases in use today by the enemies of democracy is "Yankee Imperialism". While it might sound good to those who continually harangue on the topic, it is an empty phrase, because, compared to communism, there is no such thing as "Yankee Imperialism".

It is not imperialistic to fight two major world wars and a police action war in 35 years to preserve freedom in the world. It is not imperialistic to pour billions of dollars back into those countries which have been conquered in order to put them back on their feet. It is not imperialistic to refuse to acquire any additional territory as a result of those wars. Nor is it imperialistic to spend other billions of dollars to aid struggling countries throughout the world make better places for their citizens to work and live in.

Contrast this against communism. It cannot be argued that communism fails to help the people of the countries they conquer on a materialistic level. But, to receive this aid, those countries have to subject their nationality completely to Moscow dictates. How many countries have been helped by the "good-will" of Russia without any strings attached? And yet how many square miles of the earth's surface have the Russians taken over after wars? Of course, none of this is imperialism, according to the reds — it is all done out of concern for the people of those nations.

There is no such thing as Yankee Imperialism. If Americans are guilty of anything, it is Yankee indifference — a lack of genuine concern as to what the money and the effort is spent for. While it is popular in some circles to gripe about the money spent on foreign aid, most people really don't care about the money. They just feel they should know more about the program, don't take the time to inform themselves about it, and thus have no basis for any statement other than a negative one.

The President's Peace Corps seems to be a good way to put the concern behind the money. It is not that we begrudge the dollars, but there is no sense in throwing them away by just sending them overseas by themselves. When people who want to help others go along with the money, then the citizens of other lands will realize that America is concerned with their future.

Communism in the world today is taking some rough blows. They are blows that do not receive too much comment, because the reds are smart enough to keep up a good verbal front. But, with famine in China, consistent failures in Russia's farm programs, and shortages of money, the Kremlin has its worries.

Now is the time to take the offensive. For too many years we have trembled and worried about the inroads of communism. It is time to let them be on the defensive. It is time to let the Yankee Imperialism that they created come back and haunt them in the form of Yankee concern for a troubled world.
