Cambodia Road To Be Repaired, Kennedy Order

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Kennedy has ordered foreign aid officials to get busy and repair a $30 million road in Cambodia built two years ago to demonstrate American friendship and technology. It already is falling apart.

United Press International learned today that Kennedy told International Cooperation Administration to give "top priority" to repairing the Cambodian-American friendship highway.

The 130-mile road was built under the U.S. foreign aid program two years ago. But, much to the embarrassment of Cambodia and the United States and the glee of Communists, it is falling to pieces under heavy rains.

Prince Sihanouk of Cambodia recently started out on the road from Phnom Penh to the sea, but the road — which has as many cracks as a sun-baked mud flat in some sections — was so bad he had to turn back and go by helicopter.

Kennedy read an exclusive UPI dispatch on June 25 which said America's ambassador to Cambodia, William C. Trimble, had warned the State Department that U.S. prestige in Cambodia would suffer "a severe blow" if something was not done to repair the highway.

Congressional investigators already are inquiring to charges that poor construction and engineering by two American firms caused the trouble. So is the ICA. The highway, which connects Cambodia's capital of Phnom Penh with the seaport of Sihanoukville on the Gulf of Siam, was built as a great "symbol" of the friendship of the United States and Cambodia. It also was supposed to represent the best in American road-building "know-how."

The Cambodian road was designed to be built for $15 million but the cost doubled to $30 million during its construction. And now the administration is asking Congress for another $2.7 million to repair damage which some experts say should never have happened in the first place.
