The Corn Crop

The November 1 report from Purdue University predicts a 22% drop in total corn production for Indiana this year, based on early reports and standing corn. There will be an 18% drop in the corn crop in the country as a whole.

This, of course, will be an almost total victory for the corn program of the present administration. And certainly no one can blame it on "poor weather" in the state as a whole, as growing conditions generally were excellent. They may not have been too good here in Adams county, if the fields don't start to dry up pretty soon, so farmers can work in them safely.

The cost of the farm program has been the subject of many articles, including some that were entirely erroneous, and purposely so. The cost of the program is not borne by taxes — it is borne by the sale of surplus corn.

So, not only will the decreased total yield cut the corn surplus, but the sale of the surplus corn to pay for the difference in market and the support price will further reduce the surplus.

Anyone who feels that this is not the truth, instead of quoting other articles, many of them giving entirely the wrong impression, is at perfect liberty to go to the A.S.C. office, and examine a copy of the act, which explains the financing of the program.

While corn is down 22 per cent, soybeans are down 17%. The country has never had a serious oversupply of high-protein soybeans. In fact, if war were to occur, and we hope it won't, the nation would have a shortage of soybeans, which are not stockpiled on a rotating basis like corn for national defense purposes.

The farmers of America should be proud that they can produce a surplus of farm goods, something no other economy can do. And they should not be ashamed of accepting government price supports in return — every manufacturer who asks for a tariff, every oil producer who asks for production controls, has government help.

Florida Hit
By Tornadoes
On Holiday

By United Press International
Floridians cleared away tornado rubble and rain continued in most of the east third of the nation today while snow spread from the Pacific Northwest into the Rockies.

Clear skies, which eluded most Americans Thanksgiving Day, arrived today in the Great Plains and Mississippi Valley.

Tornadoes pounced on Florida Thursday from the same squall line which spawned twisters the day before from Texas to Mississippi.

One tornado flattened several barns and killed 10 cattle near Quincy, Fla.

A funnel cloud touched down near Galliver, Fla., injuring a small boy and destroying a house trailer and a barn.

Another tornado damaged five homes in a Tampa, Fla., suburb. A fourth twister damaged one building near Pensacola, Fla.

The storm front's 35-mile-an-hour winds brought small craft warnings on both coasts of Florida. Behind the storms cold air moved in, dropping temperatures 20 or more degrees.

Two funnel clouds touched down near Charleston, S.C., but little or no damage was reported.

Heavy rains washed much of Dixie. The rain belt extended northward through the Ohio valley.

Southwest Oregon, plagued by eight inches of rain since Tuesday night, had flooding along the Coquille River, which rose four feet out of its banks. At least one family was evacuated.

Rain turned to snow in the mountains of Oregon, Washington, Idaho, northern California and Montana. The snow was moving into the northern Plains and Rockies.

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI)—A British-built Argentine jetliner on the way to New York crashed near here early Thursday, killing all 52 persons aboard.

52 Persons Killed
In Brazilian Crash

The dead included two men believed to be Americans, three Argentines on their way to join relatives in New York and an Austrian. The other 46 crash victims were Argentines not known to have close personal ties with the United States.

The casualties increased the toll of Argentine air crashes in the past year to 173 dead. Thirty-one were killed in the wreck of an army transport last Dec. 12, 23 in a domestic airline crash Jan. 7, and 67 on another internal flight July 19.

The Comet jet wrecked Thursday plunged to earth from an altitude of about 3,000 feet less than two minutes after taking off from the Viracopos air base, 60 miles west of here, one of its refueling stops.

Witnesses differed as to whether the plane caught fire in flight or crashed, exploded and then caught fire.

Modern Etiquette

By Roberta Lee

Q. Our neighbors are sometimes very cool and won't speak to us after our children have quarreled. What do you think about this?

A. Considerate and well-bred parents make every effort to remain friendly, despite their children's altercations. And usually, the children can settle such misunderstandings much faster than adults.

Q. When announcing an engagement in the newspaper, is it all right to include the picture of both the prospective bride and bridegroom?

A. Although not exactly improper, this is not customarily done. Usually, only the picture of the bride-elect is published with the announcement.

Q. I have been invited to the home of a friend whose wife is a medical doctor. Do I address her as Mrs. Taylor or as Doctor Taylor?

A. You address her as Doctor Taylor.

Q. Isn't it supposed to be bad manners for a person to use bread to sop up his gravy on his plate?

A. It was at one time, but not any longer. Bread can now be properly used for this purpose, and it should be done by breaking off a piece of the bread, dropping into the gravy, and then using the fork to pick it up and eat it.

Q. When a young girl has spent a week-end in the home of a girl friend, to whom does she address her "bread-and-butter" letter?

A. She may address the letter to her friend, but must include a message of appreciation to the girl's mother, who usually deserves much of the credit for a pleasant visit.

Q. I am invited to the birthday party of a girl friend and am to bring my boy friend who does not know this girl. Would it be proper to include his name with mine on the card enclosed with my gift?

A. You are not required to do this, but you may do so if you wish.

Q. When in a crowded restaurant, and a stranger wants to sit in a chair at your table and asks, "Do you mind," what should your response be?

A. The best answer, of course is, "Not at all."
