By United Press International
New snow fell on Indiana today with normal cold prevailing, and a chilly week featuring temperatures 8 to 12 degrees below normal and more snow was forecast.

The mercury fell into the teens throughout most of the state this morning, lows ranging from 13 at South Bend to 19 at Evansville.

Snow was falling from Lake Michigan to the Ohio River at dawn and was due to continue on a sporadic basis through Tuesday, and perhaps the entire week.

A snow blanket ranging from an inch at Evansville to 4 inches at South Bend lay across the state. It fell while temperatures were below freezing, and it created traffic hazards.

extreme northern end of the state."

Continue Work On Nuclear Power Jet

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The congressional Atomic Energy Committee disclosed today the Air Force was making definite plans to continue work on a nuclear powered Ramjet engine.

In publishing testimony on the proposed nuclear rocket (Project Rover), nuclear space power generators (Snap) and the nuclear Ramjet (Pluto), the committee said "classified responses" from the Pentagon indicated that the Pluto project would be scheduled for future work.

The program is aimed at developing a nuclear power plant which could push a vehicle with the earth's atmosphere at speeds up to three times the speed of sound. Such a vehicle could make strategic attacks at tremendous speeds at altitudes where detection would be exceedingly difficult.

Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill., chairman of the Atomic Energy Committee's research and development panel, complained at the August hearings and subsequently that the Air Force had lowered its priority on the Ramjet despite apparently successful preliminary tests.

Thus, the "classified responses," which were not further described in the committee's statement, appeared to be assurances that the project would be continued.

The testimony made public by the committee included an Air Force statement that the Defense Department had been asked to include $40 million for the Pluto project in the budget which President Kennedy will unveil this month. Last year's budget carried $7 million for Pluto.

H.B. McMillan, assistant Air Force secretary, testified that the $40 million outlay would provide for a program involving the ultimate ground test of a Ramjet engine. A decision could be made next year on whether to provide additional funds to carry the program through a flight test.

Express Thanks For Residents Of Home

The Christmas spirit prevailed almost the entire month of December for the residents of the Adams county home as various groups and individuals of the county showered them with gifts, entertained them with programs and even donned old clothes to paint the chapel there.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kitson, superintendent and matron of the home, expressed their appreciation in behalf of the 26 residents living there for the thoughtfulness and consideration extended to them during the holidays. Kitson, who has been associated with the county home for eleven and one-half years, and his wife, who has been matron for four years, said it has been a record year in regard to responses from organizations, and one of the nicest holiday seasons since they have been there.

The first party was held December 10 and then various programs and parties continued through the month of December. The residents were entertained with talent shows, Christmas programs and carol singing. They were showered with gifts including cookies, fruit and candy. One group of young people arrived wearing old clothes and painted the chapel.

There were representatives from church groups, choirs, sororities, lodge groups, various individuals, school groups, women's clubs, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, and several local merchants sent gifts. There were people from Decatur, Geneva, Berne, Linn Grove, Monmouth and other areas of the county represented. "We wish we could name each one," Mrs. Kitson said, "but we didn't keep a list and I am afraid I would forget someone. We wish to thank everyone who made the holidays a merry time for the residents here at the Adams county home."

New Farm Habitat Restoration Plans

The new farm habitat restoration program, a five-year program, was explained today by Jack Hurst, district conservation officer.

The new program, by simple agreement instead of recorded lease, between the landowner and the department of conservation, is designed to benefit wildlife.

This new program gives much broader coverage than the old 10-year program, still available, under which 2-10 acres were leased for ten years.

The acreage under the new five-year plan will be developed for the benefit of wildlife, such as pheasants, rabbits, coons, etc., Hurst explained.

They Will Provide

Under the articles of agreement the department agrees to:

1. Furnish, at no cost to the landowner, scrub and seed for the purpose of restoring the farm to wildlife productivity. This includes grain sorghum, lespedeza, etc.

2. Furnish an area sign to mark the farm as cooperating in the farm habitat restoration program.
3. Furnish landowner with plans and instructions for the development of restoration practices as explained by the district biologist.

Farmer Agrees

In return, the farmer agrees to:

1. Plant the shrubs and seed for the development of the area as recommended.

2. Take care of necessary maintenance, protect from fire, and eliminate grazing until the development will protect itself.

3. Handle hunting on his farm in the same manner as permitted prior to the agreement.

Multiflora rose, seed, and grain will be furnished to restore wildlife activity.

Farmers may inquire, or make application, by writing to Indiana department of conservation, Pittman/Robertson Project 6-D, State Office Building, Indianapolis 4, Ind.

Strikers Reject Studebaker Offer

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (UPI)—Striking workers at the Studebaker-Packard plant here Sunday overwhelmingly rejected the latest management proposals for a new contract.

Woodrow Frick, president of United Auto Workers Union Local 5, said more than 5,000 of the 6,500 striking workers attended the mass meeting at which the vote was taken.

He said he was unable to give the figures in the vote but said 95.1 per cent of the UAW members present voted against the offer. He said the strike would continue. It began last Monday night.

Attempts to have negotiations resumed will be made today at a meeting called by Indiana Labor Commissioner Robert P. Butler. Federal and state mediators will attend along with management and labor officials.

Frick said the dispute centered largely around holiday and overtime pay.

Two Mississippi Fugitives Nabbed

CROTHERSVILLE, Ind. (UPI)—Two fugitives from a Mississippi prison were captured, north of here late Sunday night while hiding out in a church after their stolen car went into a ditch.

State Police said James Edward Corley, 30, Carrollton, Miss., and Billy Ray Reynolds, 25, Columbus, Miss., did not resist arrest when officers closed in at the Uniontown Christian Church a few miles north of here.

Earlier, they were fired at after breaking into a filling station, police said.

The convicts were traced to the church by footprints left in the snow and slush, police said.

Reports from Jackson, Miss., said they fled Parchman State Penitentiary Saturday night in a prison truck, then headed north about 400 miles before they were captured.

Authorities said one of the men was found hiding in the church basement, the other in the sanctuary, only a short time after a man said he fired at two men who broke into his filling station at Crothersville.

The shotgun blast hit the car, but the men inside fled.

After running their car into a ditch, they continued on foot, police said.

The two escaped from Mississippi after they were called out of their barracks to help fight a small fire at a guard's home. They checked out a prison truck, but instead of heading to the blaze, they fled.

The truck was found abandoned Sunday at Houston, Miss., more than 100 miles east of Parchman. They then stole a car bearing Kentucky license plates and headed north.

The convicts were taken to Jackson County Jail at Browns-town on burglary charges.

Fear Algeria Situation Is Out Of Hand

ALGIERS, Algeria (UPI)—The outlawed Secret Army Organization (OAS) called a two-hour strike today in an effort to show massive support for its violent struggle to keep Algeria French.

With casualties mounting daily and the situation threatening to get out of hand, the prefect of Oran, in northwest Algeria, threatened to impose a state of siege if necessary.

Authorities in Oran, Algeria's second largest city, were concerned at what they termed an "infernal cycle of violence" — Muslim rebels and European extremists attacking each other in a growing series of reprisals and counter-reprisals.

In Algiers Sunday a car full of European youths hurled hand grenades into a Moslem hostel and machinegunned survivors, killing one and injuring ten.

The Algiers attack brought the day's casualty toll throughout Algeria to 19 dead and 34 wounded. By last midnight, official figures showed that since the first of the year terrorist violence by both sides had taken 123 lives and left 268 injured.

The leaders of the rebel Algerian provisional government were in the middle of a strategy meeting Mohammedia, Morocco, 16 miles north of Casablanca.

The meeting, which began Sunday, was the first outside the rebel exile headquarters in Tunis, Tunisia, since the government was organized in 1958.

Apparently the rebel cabinet was discussing its next move in secret negotiations with the French government on conditions for granting Algeria independence.
