Boston Celtics Win Over Philadelphia

BOSTON (UPI)—Wilt Chamberlain's strange record of never playing for a winner, and Bill Russell's equally odd mark of never playing for a loser are still intact—but barely so.

It took a last second basket by guard Sam Jones to preserve both of those streaks Thursday night and propel the Boston Celtics into the final stage of their bid for an unprecedented fourth straight National Basketball Association championship.

The Jones basket gave Boston a 109-107 victory over the Philadelphia Warriors and means the Celtics open a best-of-seven championship series with the Los Angeles Lakers here on Saturday afternoon.

The two teams will shift to the West Coast for two games after Saturday's nationally televised match and another game on Sunday afternoon at Boston Garden. Thursday night's 109-107 Boston win meant that the Chamberlain led Warriors have never beaten the Russell-paced Celtics in a title series.

Just Misses Block
Chamberlain was held to 22 points by Russell Thursday night but the cold figures did not tell a true tale of the tall Warrior's game. He had 22 rebounds and was immense in blocking shots.

In fact, he barely missed blocking the settling shot, and had personally scored five points to lift Philadelphia from a 107-102 last minute deficit.

On the winning play, Chamberlain had an impossible choice. With time running out and the score tied, he was with Russell under the Philadelphia basket. If he moved to block the Jones shot, Russell would be open for a pass. He chose to play halfway and that was the game, the series, and another step in the peculiar Chamberlain-Russell record.

In scoring, Sam Jones had 28, Heinsohn 25, Bob Cousy 21 and Russell 19 for Boston. Tom Meschery topped both clubs at 32 while Paul Arizin had 19 and Guy Rodgers 18 behind Chamberlain's 22.

No Request Made To Cancel Games

Concerning the story on the county tourney which appeared in Tuesday's Daily Democrat, it was learned this morning that officials of Berne high school did not request their season games with Pleasant Mills and Hartford be dropped from the schedule.

The story, concerning the dropping of the Berne team from the county meet, and the future of the tourney, said that Berne had requested they be released from their contracts with Pleasant Mills and Hartford, in order to enable them to play in the annual county affair.

Apparently, however, this was just a tentative idea by Berne school officials. Robert Baumgartner, principal of Pleasant Mills high school, said this morning that Berne "had never asked his school to release them from their season game."
