Bitter Rift In Algeria

ALGIERS (UPI)—A bitter rift was reported brewing today in the Algerian nationalist government (GPRA) in Tunis virtually on the eve of the birth of an independent Algeria.

The vote in Sunday's referendum ran more than 99 to 1 in favor of independence and President Charles de Gaulle was expected to pronounce the end of 132 years of French rule over the northwest African territory later this week.

Troops Moving In
Boumedienne and two of his aides were charged with "criminal activities," and one of them—a Maj. Slimane—was reported under arrest. Boumedienne's whereabouts were unknown, but there were unofficial reports he had slipped into Algeria to court the support of guerrilla bands totalling perhaps 10,000 men.

Reports circulating in Paris said the Algerian nationalist leaders were moving troops into some Algerian cities and villages without waiting for the formal independence proclamation. In many places the green-and-white flag of the FLN already flew.

The Ben Bella faction was reported pressing for speedy nationalization of Algeria's factories, farmlands and means of distribution. The right wing of the government, led by Premier Ben Youssef Ben Khedda, favors greater moderation.

A sizeable proportion of the Algerian guerrillas based outside the country was believed to support Ben Bella. The Tunis regime was reported massing its forces

Six Death Row Prisoners Fail In Prison Break

SAN QUENTIN, Calif. (UPI)—Six death row inmates at San Quentin Prison surrendered amid a barrage of tear gas shells early today three hours after they took two guards hostage in a bold effort to escape.

"We gambled and lost," said Luis Moya, one of the six convicts. "We were going out the gates."

They also surrendered two guns they had taken from one of the hostages, gun rail officer C. L. Deatrick. Deatrick was struck on the head by the inmates but not seriously injured.

The first sign of trouble came when R.H. Kardell, the guard assigned to death row, telephoned at 1:07 a.m. PDT (3:07 a.m. CDT) and said urgently, "We're in trouble." Deatrick went to his aid and moments later Associate Warden Dale Frady learned that both men were hostages.

The prisoners took a .38-caliber revolver and a 12-gauge shotgun from Deatrick.

More than a dozen guards, led by Associate Warden Louis Nelson, massed on a ledge outside the row of cells occupied by the condemned men and fired tear gas into the cell area at 2:45 a.m. The prisoners responded with a telephoned plea to Warden Fred Dickson to "knock it off." They said they would release the hostages when guards stopped firing tear gas.

The six involved in the escape plot were identified as Moya, Clyde Bates, Manuel Chavez, Augustine Baldonad, Willard Winhoven, and David Bickley. All six are convicted murderers.

James Neiswonger, supervisor of the parole violator unit, said that the prisoners returned to their cells at 4:07 a.m. and order was restored.

He said only the six condemned men participated in the attempted break, and that other death row prisoners were urging them to give up after the tear gas was fired.

The six got out of their cells by sawing the bars with a hacksaw. It was not known how or where they obtained the hacksaw. Five of them sawed their way out and they broke the lock on Winhoven's cell and released him.

Then they overpowered Kardell and after that, Deatrick, who was on duty on a gun rail within the cell block. Neiswonger said they probably struck Deatrick from behind with some instrument.

Grant Street Oiled Preparatory To Paving

Grant street, between the nickel Plate railroad and High street, was oiled Saturday, preparatory for paving. It was learned today. The street is still torn up between High and Mercer, and between Winchester and Line streets, which is torn up between Bollman and the Erie railroad.

A new water main is being installed along Bollman street from Russell street to Line street, but the line runs along the narrow street most of the way.

Water Pressure Down For Slight Period

Water pressure in Decatur was down for about 15 to 20 minutes Friday evening, when a pump at the treatment plant quit working due to heat.

City engineer Ralph E. Roop said this morning that the heating element in one of the pumps overheated, causing the pump to go out. The pumps are dual pumps, however, and the other pump was turned on to bring the pressure back to normal. Roop explained the water pressure was down about 20 pounds.
