Decatur Represented

Decatur will be well represented Tuesday when the first national park-land in Indiana is officially dedicated — the Lincoln Boyhood National Memorial in Spencer county.

Gerald R. Durkin, president of the Adams county historical society, has been designated by Sen. R. Vance Hartke as official representative of the county at the meeting. He will be accompanied by a good-sized delegation from the county.

Sen. Hartke will be master of ceremonies at the presentation and Interior Secretary Stewart Udall will be the main speaker. Winfield K. Denton, congressman from the eighth district, where the park will be located, and Conrad Wirth, national park service director, are among the other dignitaries who will be present.

The memorial is on land where Lincoln lived from the time he was seven until he was 21, the formative years of his life. As it has been said "Kentucky gave Lincoln to the Nation, Indiana made Lincoln, and Lincoln made Illinois."

The park will ultimately include 200 acres. The bill creating the memorial calls for an expenditure of $1 million, with no more than $75,000 spent for acquiring land.

The new memorial will place Indiana on the national park map, and will result in hundreds of thousands of tourist visits to the state, tourists who will spend millions of dollars here in their search for something different on their vacation.

Indiana has much to offer, but it is only when properly presented that it makes its best showing. Sen. R. Vance Hartke has done a fine job of presenting Indiana to the nation. The new recreation sites on the Wabash river will bring millions of dollars in revenue to the state, and to the businessmen of the state who are able to take advantage of the new sites. This new national memorial is part of Sen. Hartke's dream of a better Indiana, visited and honored by the entire nation.

Unlike some U. S. senators, who seem more interested in obstructing government than in making government better and of greater service to the people, Sen. Hartke has been a shining light during his first four years of office.

Viral Strain May Be
Stiff-Neck CauseBy DELOS SMITH
UPI Science Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Exciting news from virology is that a viral strain, long a candidate for inclusion among the ECHO viruses, is not only about to make the grade but may also turn out to be the long-sought stiff-neck virus.

This is the "Caldwell" virus strain first isolated in Kansas City in 1955 and associated with many minor ills of the central nervous system. So far no virologist has identified its family connections positively but the chances are it's one of the large, tricky and troublesome ECHO group.

Four virologists of the viral disease laboratory of the California Department of Health revealed that 16 virus strains isolated from persons with central-nervous-system disease since 1955 have turned out to be immunologically identical to the "Caldwell" strain.

Neutralize California strains. By this they meant that antibodies produced in laboratory animals and in tissue cultures by "Caldwell" viruses neutralized all 16 of the California strains. The latter had characteristics of the ECHO group, of which there are 28 identified types, which made the presumption strong that the "Caldwell" and the California viruses are the same and are ECHO.

Furthermore, their evidence indicates that this virus is a cause if not the cause of aseptic meningitis, a usually benign disease whose prominent symptom is the stiff neck. Other things can put passing stiffness into necks, of course, but a virus stiffener has been long suspected.

Indeed, the whole big family of enteroviruses have been suspects. The Echo viruses are among them, and so are the coxsackie viruses which are of 29 types divided into two groups. And so are the polio viruses. Enteroviruses, so called because they multiply in the intestines, are the causes of a host of human ills.

The California scientists were Drs. Edwin H. Lennette, Nathalie J. Schmidt, Robert L. Magoffin, and Anna Wiener and they reported their news to the New England Journal of Medicine. They got their 16 strains from as many individuals two of whom had no symptoms of illness.

Find Previous Infection. The 14 sick persons were clearly suffering from aseptic meningitis.

Of the 14, 12 were children. The two well persons who harbored the viruses were family contacts of the sick. The scientists also found evidence of a previous infection with the virus in four other contacts.

The scientists had sought the "Caldwell" viruses in the body excretions of many persons but found it only in persons with aseptic meningitis or their parents or brothers and sisters. Always there was a close relationship in time to the presence of the virus and of the disease. This strongly pointed to cause and effect.

Their work focused more light into the murky field of which enteroviruses cause what illnesses among people. The symptoms of aseptic meningitis are sometimes diagnosed as "non-paralytic polio," indicating a polio virus is the cause. The California work promised to shift all responsibility to a member of the ECHO family.

Berne-French Teacher
To Conference At I. U.

Mrs. Beth Blue, a teacher at Berne-French high school, Berne, will attend the sixth annual conference on English language arts in the secondary school to be held July 12-13 at Indiana University. Two hundred teachers of English from Indiana and adjoining states will be on the I.U. campus for the meeting, which will study the scope and sequence in the English language arts.

Richard A. Meade of the University of Virginia, and Floyd Rinker, executive director of the commission on English of the college entrance examination, will be the principal speakers for the conference.

Three Are Enrolled
In Summer Quarter

MUNCIE, Ind. — Among the new freshmen at Ball State Teachers College who are enrolled for the summer quarters are three Adams county people.

They are David D. Biery, son of Frances M. Biery of W. Line, Geneva; James D. Nelson of 217 S. 7th St., Decatur, and Paul L. Moser, son of Richard Moser of 410 N. Washington, Geneva.

NEWPORT, R. I. (FHTNC)—Es. Charles L. Heare, Jr., USN, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. Ivan Heare of route 2, Decatur, Ind., was graduated recently from the Navy's officer candidate school at the Naval Base, Newport, R. I. He was presented his diploma by Vice Admiral William R. Smedberg, III, chief of Naval personnel. The 16-week school trains officer candidates, college graduates and outstanding naval personnel in naval sciences and leadership.

Modern Etiquette

Q. Will you please comment on the art of correct handshaking in general?

A. In addition to the much-frowned-upon limp, flabby handshake, try to avoid the bone-crushing type, which is painful if the other person is wearing a ring; the pumple-handle technique; and the refusal-to-let-go manner, which is usually reserved for women and is supposed to indicate great ardor. A good handshake is at elbow level, and is firm, but brief.

Q. I have just received an invitation to a bridal shower on some girl whom I scarcely know. Would I be justified in ignoring this invitation?

A. This would be a little on the rude side. You are, however, justified in saying you are sorry, but that you have another engagement for that particular date.

Q. What does one use for putting butter into one's baked potato or other item of food on one's plate?

A. The fork is best for this.

"THANKS CHIEF"—These words were expressed by Elias McDonald (left), chief aviation boatswain's mate, hydraulics, brother of Glenn McDonald of 315 Oak St., on the hangar deck of the Pacific Fleet attack carrier USS Midway (CVA-41), after receiving his chief's hat from Chief R. G. Goodman. McDonald, a native of Decatur, advanced to chief May 16, while the giant carrier was enroute to Sasebo, Japan.
