School Dropouts

Businessmen across the nation are alarmed at the rate of dropouts from high school — the rate is gradually increasing, and if it continues, 7½ million youths will quit high school before graduation in the 1960's.

Why do businessmen care? For the obvious reason — a high school dropout has little chance of permanent employment, and consequently will face an entire life of low buying power, of employment, and drain on his community.

Unemployment today among youth under age 21 in the labor force is three times as high as in the adult population, and over half of these unemployed are dropouts!

Sure, $1.50 or $2.50 an hour, or even $4 an hour sounds like "big money" to a high school student. But educated men today are bringing in $10,000 to $20,000 a year — every year. Not just a high hourly wage for part of each year, while you and your growing family have to live on relief the rest of the time.

Here in Decatur and Adams county every youth has a real chance to make, not just a living, but a very fine living, if he will just buckle down and finish high school, then attend a college or advanced training course in what ever he is skilled in.

There is more to life than just making a high hourly wage. You have to be able to handle what you make — invest it wisely in purchases and invest your time wisely. School, its association with other people, considering many of the problems of the community and world, is a big part of the "growing up" process.

No one avoids this process — some may quit school, but they will only have to learn the hard way. And for every one who does finally learn the hard way, as many of our older generation has, 10 will fail, or only partly succeed.

Be a little smarter than the 7½ million who will cut short their chances of success in the world — stay in school, and graduate!

Congo Crisis Maze Of Contradictions

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Almost from the beginning, the Congo crisis has been a maze of contradictions.

And if the casual reader finds himself lost in its twists and turns, surely no apology is needed.

For example: On Dec. 14, 1961, President Kennedy, a strong supporter of the United Nations' campaign to unify the Congo, received from Katanga's secessionist president, Moise Tshombe, a request that he intervene so that Tshombe could begin negotiations with the central government premier, Cyrille Adoula.

Out of this came the agreement at Kitona in which Tshombe agreed to end Katanga's secession.

Yet, almost exactly one year later, the agreement not only had not been implemented, but Katanga students were shouting "Down with Kennedy," trampling the U.S. flag and starting a fire on U.S. consulate grounds in the Katanga capital of Elisabethville.

Tshombe himself was denouncing Americans in general as "racists who think they can buy the African with dollars."

This was an initial result of a U.S. decision to send a military team to the Congo to determine military needs of U.N. forces there.

Within the dispute between Tshombe and the central government itself there is danger of over-simplification even if one makes no attempt at a judgment.

It could be declared a simple question of self-determination—whether the people of Katanga have the right to decide their own future relationship with the Congo as a whole.

It also could be declared simply the result of the central government's desire to take over the income from Katanga's copper and cobalt wealth.

It also could be regarded as a question of Tshombe's own desire to remain in power and his refusal to surrender to central authority.

It is doubtful that the tribesman in the bush has much interest in any one of the three, so a certain amount of self-interest must be involved.

The U.S. and the U.N. take the position that Katanga has no more right to secede from the Congo than would a state to secede from the United States.

Katanga's tax income from the Union Miniere copper mines this year will amount to between $30 and $40 million, just about enough to cover a one-month deficit for the central government. So the money itself cannot be, at the moment, a controlling factor.

The U.N. position is that neither Katanga nor the remainder of the Congo can achieve stability without each other. Katanga needs the Congo's agricultural produce and a port through which to ship its minerals without depending on Rhodesia or Portuguese Angola.

Even with the income from Katanga, it is expected the Congo will need outside aid for years.

Aside from his income from Union Miniere, Tshombe's support has come primarily from powerful voices in Belgium and Britain and from some members of the U.S. Congress.

Leaders of the newly independent African state in general oppose him.

Huge Reassessing Job Is Completed

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The mammoth job of reassessing all taxable property in Indiana has been completed except for the readjustments by tax review boards, and those may go on until next summer.

Chairman Richard Worley of the Indiana State Tax Board said today his estimate of $8.5 billion as the total property value, made before all counties had reported, was near the 92-county figure of $8,483,000,000, which is the figure being used for budget purposes.

Included in that total is Lake County, the last to report. Lake's valuation was set at approximately $988 million after the Calumet Twp. assessor handed in a new total when the first tentative figures were questioned by Worley. Calumet's tentative figures indicated a loss in value, which Worley doubted.

Worley said "we will have men check the Calumet Twp. figures, but this is not an investigation."

The chairman said Marion and Lake Counties have thousands of appeals from assessments yet to be heard, but both counties have started preparing bills for the spring tax payments.

He warned that taxpayers who have appeals pending should pay tax bills by the May 6 deadline even though they have reason to believe they will get a reduction. "The fact the appeal is pending doesn't prevent the taxes from being due," he said. "If a reduction is granted on review later, the taxpayer will get credit on his November bill."

Worley said the state board has heard about 3,900 appeals and 9,000 more must be heard before the assessment is actually completed—"probably next summer."

Firm's Revenues Over $1 Billion

NEW YORK (UPI) — Harold S. Geneen, president of International Telephone & Telegraph Corp., reported Wednesday that the firm's sales and revenues had exceeded $1 billion for the first time in history in 1962.

Sales and revenues reached a figure of about $1,066 billion, compared with $930.5 million in 1961.

Thanks Firemen

To Monroe Rural Fire Dept. Gentlemen:

At the regular meeting of the town council Nov. 2, 1962, it was unanimously decided to pay tribute to the several organizations in the Monroe area that have contributed greatly to our community.

As we all know, your group was greatly responsible in the town of Monroe area to provide the most and best fire fighting equipment for this size town in the state of Indiana.

We as a town council feel that you are therefore also a part of us and we want to use this method in thanking you for your wonderful work in the area.

Thank you for your part in the industrial appreciation banquet.

We hope that we can continue to work together in our area and make Monroe and community a better and safer place in which to live.

On behalf of the town of Monroe, the council therefore would like to go on record by saying that we appreciate all the projects that the rural fire department takes part in year after year.

Again we say thank you.
Yours sincerely,
Monroe Town Council

Moderate Cold Is Settled On State

By United Press International
Montonous cloudiness and moderate cold settled down for a long winter's nap in Indiana today.

Generally sub-freezing temperatures kept from melting a glazed snow leftover from before Christmas and there was no early prospect of sufficient warming to bring about a thaw.

Temperatures crested Wednesday at points ranging from 28 at Fort Wayne to 34 at Evansville, and overnight lows ranged from 24 at Evansville to 28 at South Bend.

Highs today will range from the mid to upper 30s, lows tonight from the 20s to 33 and highs Friday from 31 to 35.

Continued cloudy conditions were forecast at least through Saturday with no important temperature changes.

Jack Carson Dies Of Death Dealing Cancer

ENCINO, Calif. (UPI) — Actor Jack Carson turned in one of his greatest performances during the last two months of his life by concealing a death-dealing cancer.

He died Wednesday at the age of 52 of a malignancy of the liver.

Carson succumbed only a few hours before cancer claimed another Hollywood personality, actor producer Dick Powell, and less than three weeks since the deaths of character actors Charles Laughton and Thomas Mitchell, both also of cancer.

Carson's death came as a shock to his friends, who had not been told of the actor's illness at his insistence. He had undergone surgery about six weeks ago for the malignancy and was confined to bed at home for the past two weeks. His wife, Sandra, and brother, Robert, were with him when death came.

Frank Stempel, Carson's agent for more than 25 years, said the actor's closest friends were told of his illness only recently.

"Jack evidently knew he had cancer, but he didn't tell anybody," he said. "I talked to Jack Tuesday night and this morning. He wasn't feeling well, but he was all right."

Collapses On Stage
But a hint of Carson's failing health came last Aug. 26 at Newark, N.J., when he collapsed on stage during dress rehearsal for "Critics' Choice." Physicians said—at the time—he had a stomach disorder.

His last appearance was on Walt Disney's "Wonderful World of Color" on television four months ago when he appeared to be in good health and spirits.

Carson's first stage appearance came when—because of his size—he was chosen to play the part of Hercules in a college production. It was an auspicious debut. He tripped during a performance and knocked down half the set. A college friend, Dave Willock, thought it was so funny he persuaded Carson to team with him in a vaudeville act.

Carson came to Hollywood in a new Hupmobile in 1936 to play bit parts in movies and on radio. He appeared in more than 40 pictures and starred on radio throughout his career.

Teams With Singer
However, Carson didn't reach fame as a motion picture star until he teamed with singer Dennis Morgan in "Two Guys from Texas" and other "Two Guys..." films.

"He was my very best friend," Morgan said Wednesday night. "Besides pictures, we traveled to hundreds of Army camps and hospitals together during the war. We often went hunting and fishing together."

In addition to his wife and brother, Carson is survived by his mother, Elsa Carson, and two children by a previous marriage to singer Kay St. Germain, John Jr., 21, and Kathryn, 17.

Funeral arrangements were pending at Forest Lawn Mortuary.

Born in Carman, Manitoba, Canada, on Oct. 27, 1910, Carson nevertheless always thought of himself as a native American. His family moved to Milwaukee, Wis., when he was a youngster.

He considered it his hometown. He was educated at St. John's Military Academy in Delafield, Wis., and at Carleton College in Northfield, Minn., where, at 6-foot-2, 220 pounds, he was a football star.

Plays Dramatic Roles
After numerous bit parts in Hollywood and the "Two Guys From..." comedy series, Carson went on to make his mark in straight roles.

His dramatic credits included "A Star Is Born," "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof," "Rally Round the Flag," "Mildred Pierce," "The Male Animal," and "Gentleman Jim."

The present Mrs. Carson is the actor's fourth wife. His first was Betty Lynn Carson. After his marriage to Miss St. Germain ended in divorce in 1950, Carson married actress Lola Albright in 1952. They were divorced in 1958 and he married Sandra Tucker Jan. 27, 1961.

Some Progress In Talks On Dock Strike

NEW YORK (UPI) — Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz and a university professor hold talks today with both sides in the east and west coast dock strike that has tied up shipping for almost two weeks.

Undersecretary of Labor James Reynolds, in reporting "some real progress" was made in negotiations with shippers and longshoremen Wednesday, said Prof. James Healey of Harvard would make a quick survey of union welfare and pension demands.

Reynolds said Healey would study the demands and then report to Wirtz. The labor secretary plans to meet with the disputants after getting the report.

Some 75,000 dockworkers walked off their jobs Dec. 23, virtually closing east and west ports, idling hundreds of ships and millions of tons of cargo, and forcing layoffs in related industries.

Five ocean liners docked in New York City Wednesday, and the 3,363 passengers aboard had to carry their own luggage off the ships.

When Wirtz recessed the talks Wednesday, both sides were reported only four cents apart on the issue of wages. The NYSA had offered a 22-cent hourly wage boost spread over two years, while the ILA was believed to be holding out for a 26-cent increase.

However the NYSA claimed that union fringe benefit demands would bring the package to 50 cents an hour.
