Why Pay Taxes?

A little-understood fact lies behind the tax-support money that goes to U.S. farmers through the subsidy program — all of us, through taxes and subsidies, are helping redistribute wealth to the farmers who produce it, but share little of it because of the free market system which penalizes them for efficiency.

Now, that's a pretty big sentence to swallow. But the problem is a real one. It is not just an American problem. The same problem is faced by every European country which has a farm surplus — France, Britain, West Germany, etc.

Some solve it differently. Some set the price for grain and then reimburse the elevators for the difference. Some use a subsidy to the farmer. But all of them deal with the problem. And in no country, other than the United States, has a supposedly responsible group of farmers suggested ending subsidies.

Our principal Federal tax is the graduated net income tax. This taxes you in proportion to what you earn — if you earn a very large amount, you pay proportionately greater. If you earn little, you pay very little, or none at all.

Thus, if a "middle-man" makes a large profit "off the farmer," through the subsidy system a portion of his income is taken, and redistributed to the farmer.

We must maintain a healthy farm system. Without food production this nation would fold in no time. If farmers earn next to nothing, it imposes a hardship on the entire nation. The great depression proved what can happen when trade stagnates because the worker and farmer have no purchasing power — and no one wants to go through such a period again.

The 1963 feed grain program, which provides a fair return to the farmer for his labor by guaranteeing him a return, will start soon. You can help keep America strong by signing up. You can help yourself, too — because you will then have more spare time in which to enjoy life.

Also this spring, wheat farmers will determine the future prices of wheat through a referendum. They can keep high prices, with controls, or return to profitless wheat, and grow all of it they can eat. This problem does not effect us here as it does in the great Midwest, but we will still get to vote. Regardless of how you feel, if you are eligible to vote, you should vote your convictions, and make our Democratic process work. And whether your side, or the other, wins, remember that in a Democracy you will always get a chance to change again at the time of the next election.

Advises Against
Teen-Ager DrivingBy HORTENSE MYERS
United Press International

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — An attractive brunet mother-winner of a 1963 national honor for safety work — has a recipe for reducing the tragically high accident rate among adolescent drivers.

But it is not one the teen-agers will like. Mrs. Donna Agness, Peru, who won the Carol Lane Award for her work in safety education, said her answer to the problem of teen-age drivers is "don't hand them the keys to the car."

"You get in with them. Give them a chance to drive in all kinds of weather—but with a parent in the car with them," she said.

Since the teen-age preference is to ban all "elderly" people like parents from their auto driving dates, the advent of Mother or Father on a trip to the drug store, the drive-in movie, or even to church may not meet with full enthusiasm.

But Mrs. Agness, who has two teen-age sons, believes that the responsibility of being at the wheel of a car belongs to the parents.

She pointed out that teen-agers technically are better drivers than older people because of their youth but what they often fail to grasp is "a sense of responsibility." They also lack "the experience of driving in all kinds of weather under all conditions."

She believes that if parents quit handing the keys to the family car and to their teen-agers when they first get their driving license and get in the car with them, this sense of responsibility and experience can be acquired with less risk of crackups.

"I think driver education is an essential course in school," she added. "I would oppose any effort to eliminate these courses. But parents must set a good example as responsible drivers, too."

Wednesday will be "Ladies Day" at the Indiana legislature. About 200 Republican women from throughout the state will visit the legislature, observe what their lawmakers do, and take them to lunch.

The occasion, known as "A Day with the Legislature," will bring county and district vice-chairmen, legislative chairmen, club presidents and others to the Hoosier capital for the day.

It also will give the GOP women a chance to complete plans for about 100 of them to attend a Washington conference April 26-28 headed by national committee woman Ione Harrington, state vice

Modern Etiquette
By Roberta Lee

Q. What is the proper manner of holding the coffee or tea cup?
A. The handle of the cup should be held firmly between thumb and fingers — not hooked through with your index finger. And, when holding the cup, watch your little finger that it doesn't get crooked out in an affected pose. Keep it in close with your other fingers.

Q. When a woman is visiting a friend for the evening, should she take her purse into the living room with her, or should she leave it in the bedroom with her wraps?
A. If she has anything, such as cigaretts, in her bag that she may need in the living room, she should take the bag with her.

Q. On which arm of her father does the bride proceed down the aisle of the church?
A. On his right arm.

Q. What is the proper time of day for making calls of condolence?
A. This type of call may be made at any time of the day.
