

Russia Using Cuban Caves To Store Supplies

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Army intelligence chief Maj. Gen. Alva R. Fitch has disclosed that the Russians are using Cuban caves to store military equipment and supplies, not long-range missiles.

Testifying Wednesday before the Senate preparedness subcommittee, Fitch said there are several thousand caves in Cuba which could be used to store military equipment.

There is definite knowledge, he said, of considerable activity in the caves of storing ammunition, supplies, vehicles and even planes.

But Fitch took issue with Cuban refugee claims that the Russians hid strategic missiles in the caves instead of moving them out last fall.

"While all such reports receive extensive analysis, it is our belief that the Soviets did in fact remove all strategic weapons systems that were in Cuba at the time of the quarantine," Fitch said.

In many cases, Fitch said, reports indicate the activity at the caves is being carried out entirely by Russian personnel, with all Cubans barred from the areas.

At his news conference Wednesday Kennedy said he was dissatisfied with the rate at which Soviet troops are being pulled out of Cuba.

Kennedy said he did not have precise information on the rate of withdrawal, but he made it clear it was not fast enough to suit him.

Before the Senate subcommittee, Fitch also said:

"No nuclear warheads are believed to be in Cuba, although they could be used by some of the Russian weapons installed there."

Heavier, more modern Soviet equipment has been sent to Cuba during a year-long buildup. Included are ground-to-ground mis-

Hi-Way Trailer Court News

Mrs. Opal Zimmerman is staying with her son, Gregg Zimmerman and family, 70 Bella Casa.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lough are the new residents at 19 Krick Street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Paul McAhren of Huntington, former residents of the court here, are the parents of a baby girl, born last Saturday, and has been named Susan. McAhren is a student at Huntington College.

Dr. and Mrs. Harold DeVor, 521 S. 13th St.; Mrs. Agnes Wright 6 Krick St., and Mr. and Mrs. Donald Boroff and family of Van Wert, Ohio, were among those who attended the 60th birthday party to George Blair III, in the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Blair, Jr., in Fort Wayne last Monday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Reed Linton and son Douglas of Ohio City, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Eversole, 62 Bella Casa, last Sunday and attended the hockey game in Fort Wayne in the afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Gumm and daughter Lisa, 60 Bella Casa, observed their 6th wedding anniversary March 2.

Mrs. Walter Rolen, 41 Star Lane, was a patient at the Adams County memorial hospital from Saturday until Monday.

We welcome another new resident to the court, the 7 pound and 11 ounce son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Henkle, 10 Detroit Ave., who arrived Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Jewel Gumm and son Ernie of Louisville, Ky., spent Wednesday and Thursday of last week with her brother, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Gumm, 63 Bella Casa, and also called upon Mrs. Esther Gumm, 60 Bella Casa, Thursday morning.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience was another step in the Kremlin-Vatican rapprochement of recent months, which has led to speculation of a possible further easing of tensions, establishment of some kind of diplomatic relations and even a meeting between the Pope and Khrushchev.

Adzhubel, who listened soberly as the Pope addressed the mass audience in French about the church's "neutrality" and work for peace, said: "It was a fine speech, I was very impressed."

The Russian couple was alone in the library with the Pope except for a Russian-speaking priest who acted as an interpreter.

The audience