Boom In Culture Is Underway In Nation

By HARRY FERGUSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A recent visitor to the White House asked President Kennedy to identify the subject of an oil portrait hanging in the Blue Room. Kennedy studied it for some time and then replied, "I don't know. Those things have been changed so much."

Mrs. Jacqueline Kennedy did not strike the match that ignited the cultural explosion in the United States, but she has been so active in promoting it that sometimes even her husband can't keep up with her. The nation is fairly familiar with the changes she has made in the White House as a result of the televised tour she conducted. But her influence has been wider and deeper than what has happened at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave.

Start At Once

The Kennedys plumped for culture as soon as they moved in. The doors were thrown open to long-hair music, ballet and Shakespeare, which represented a sharp change from what went on during the administration of Dwight D. Eisenhower. So carried away by the new order of things was Arthur Schlesinger Jr., special assistant to the President, that he could not resist a comment on Eisenhower's taste for popular music:

"In the executive mansion, where Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians once played, we now find Isaac Stern, Pablo Casals, Stravinsky and the Oxford Players. I think we will not leave it to the Soviet Union to discover the Van Gogh's of the future."

Has Wide Influence

The influence of the White House is so wide that whatever the President or the First Lady show an interest in has a good chance of enjoying a boom. Mrs. Kennedy has been active in the National Cultural Center here, she attended the opening night of the Lincoln Center in New York and she received this citation from New York University: "Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy, through her genuine concern for the fine arts, has served the people well. She has enhanced the importance of the White House as a national artistic monument."

What she did in the White House was to order an inventory of about 26,000 items in storage, and she made some interesting discoveries. She began to move out some of the modern furniture and replace it with antiques. She persuaded wealthy persons to donate about $1 million worth of antiques and art objects.

Kennedy appointed August Hecksher, director of the Twentieth Century Fund, as White House cultural co-ordinator and one of his duties is to survey the relationship between the government and the arts which has been cool almost to the freezing point.

Arouses Most Suspicion

Painting seems to arouse more suspicion among the anti-culture group than any other art, and there are always stories going around about some abstract artist who won first prize with a painting that was hanging upside down.

Last year first prize in a winter color contest entered by 12,000 high school students on the theme of "What America Means to Me" was awarded to Sharon Whittaker of Ravenna, Ohio. Her entry showed a bleeding American eagle lying on the ground, and persons viewing it here asked what it symbolized. Nobody could explain it except Sharon, who said the American eagle was half dead because of all the strife and worry going on in the United States.

Such things do not discourage the interest in and sale of art. Sears Roebuck & Co. currently is dealing in art and you can buy it on the installment plan. An exhibit put together by Vincent Price is currently on tour of American cities and did good business in Washington. Prices run from a few dollars up to several hundred and the frame always is included.

Another Puzzler

Sculpture, too, encounters some lifted eyebrows among the non-believers. Two years ago, Jean Tinguely, a Swiss sculptor, put together an awesome machine for the New York Museum of

Manpower Advisory Committee Named

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — A 15-member Governor's Manpower Advisory Committee was appointed Thursday by Governor Welsh with Franklin D. Schurz, South Bend Tribune publisher, as chairman.

The committee will coordinate efforts of local groups concerned with manpower supply, demand and utilization and will concentrate on training and retraining programs under the federal Manpower Development and Training Act of 1962.

Schurz also is chairman of the St. Joseph County local committee which helped obtain in South Bend approval of the first training classes in the nation last September.

Classes also are in progress or ready to start in Indianapolis, Evansville, Fort Wayne, Columbus, Bedford, Terre Haute and Lake County.

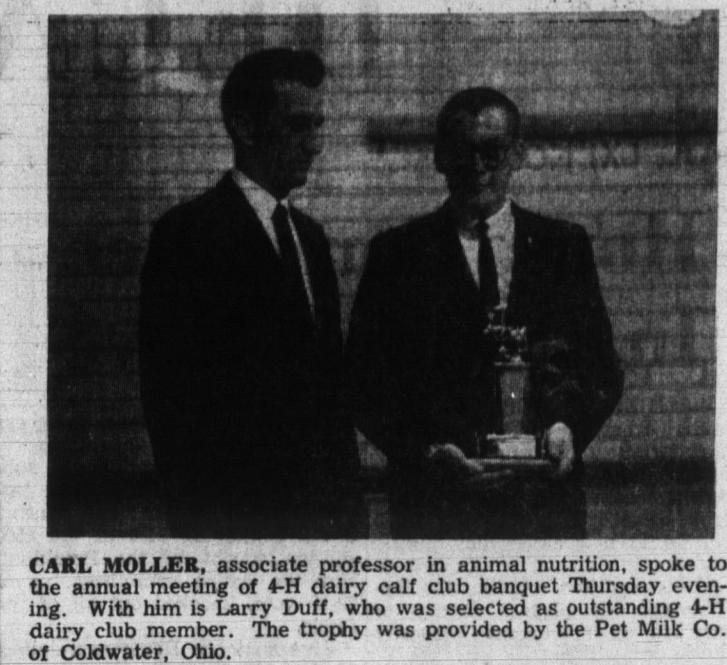

Welsh said the advisory committee will "be my principal adviser on training programs" and provide liaison with Washington agencies.

He said federal allotments to Indiana for training and retraining would probably amount to more than $3 million in the next fiscal year.

Other members of the committee are Dallas Sells, president of the Indiana AFL-CIO; Albert L. Summers, secretary of the State Building Council, and Harry Daugherty of the United Steel Workers Union, all of Indianapolis and representing labor; Harold Schuman, Indianapolis, general manager of the Indiana Manufacturers Association; Paul Salanaka, Indianapolis, personnel director of the RCA Home Instrument Division, and Lyman H. Bell, Vincennes, president of Hoosier Gas Corp., all representing management; Dr. George W. Finnell, associate dean of the Indiana University School of Business, and Dr. John J. Young, Mishawaka city school superintendent, representing education.

Public members in addition to Schurz are John Scott, publisher of the Lafayette Journal & Courier; Lewis F. Nicolini, director of the Indiana Employment Security Division; William Grief, Evansville; William C. Baker, Columbus. Others are Merlin Heningar, state supervisor of the U.S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Apprenticeship Training, and E.L. Butz, dean of agriculture at Purdue University.

Some Light Frost Reported In State

By United Press International
The spring symphony struck a sour note in its Indiana concert today as frost nipped the season's new greenery.

Temperatures sank sub-freezing lows to 28 at South Bend and Fort Wayne, 29 at Lafayette, 30 at Indianapolis, 32 at Evansville. Cincinnati recorded 25 and Louisville 33.

The frost chill which developed after two days of record-breaking April heat earlier this week was expected to relax gradually through the weekend with mild readings in the 60s developing as daytime highs.

The high today will range from 55 to 64, the low tonight from 38 to the 40s, and the high Saturday in the low 60s throughout the state. No appreciable change was expected Sunday.

Some areas were expected to have fair skies, some partly cloudy and some cloudy today, with a consistent partly cloudy predicted for the entire state Saturday and Sunday.

The only precipitation expected through the weekend was widely scattered showers tonight in the southern third.

The chill overnight lows this morning followed a cool day Thursday when temperatures climbed no higher than 45 at South Bend, 48 at Lafayette, 49 at Fort Wayne, 51 at Indianapolis and 55 at Evansville.

The five-day outlook called for temperatures averaging 5 to 10 degrees above normal north and near or slightly above normal central and south with only minor day-to-day variations through next Wednesday.

Precipitation during the period will average around one-half inch central and south and one to two-tenths of an inch north.
