Negro Says Year At Ole Miss Milestone

JACKSON, Miss. (UPI) — To James H. Meredith, a 30-year-old Negro, graduation Sunday from the University of Mississippi is "but a single milestone" in a life-long task of advancing the status of his people in America.

Meredith collected his cap and gown this week even before the state college board cleared the way for his participation in commencement exercises at Ole Miss. He took his final exams Wednesday and then returned to his home in Jackson to await the ceremonies.

Upstairs in his apartment in a red brick building surrounded by old wooden Negro homes, Meredith's wife, Mary Jane, was in bed recovering from an operation. On the week-end of his graduation, Meredith was having to pinch-hit as a baby sitter for their 3-year-old son, John Howard, and pick up the groceries.

The Negro whose entry into Ole Miss was accomplished by the use of hundreds of federal marshals and up to 30,000 army troops told a reporter he hopes to go "three or four years more" to college but he wants to do it in Europe. England is his choice.

"I want to study law or political science," he said in an interview. Behind him were months of loneliness as the only Negro student at Ole Miss, the taunts of white students who were against him and the harassment of cherry bombs exploding in his dormitory; also memories of the grim night of Sept. 30, 1962 when two persons were killed during rioting following his arrival on the campus.

"I've given many reasons why I went to the university," Meredith said. "Now it's been done, and I really know why I went. It was part of a bigger thing... to make it a fact that any citizen can get what is offered by the state to any other citizen."

"This doesn't mean that everybody has to do it. But it should be established that it can be done."

"I didn't gain the right last October. I always had the right. But that right had to be established."

Major Development In Stalemate Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A union source said he expected a major development today in the stalemate over railroad plans to eliminate thousands of jobs, and the union threat to stage a nationwide strike Aug. 29 if the work rules are changed.

The source refused to reveal the nature of the development. But, his statement followed a report that the unions were seeking some plan which would lead to a settlement, either through additional collective bargaining or some sort of voluntary arbitration.

The unions announced Thursday.

day for the first time that they were willing to try to settle the dispute on the basis of a modified version of suggestions made by Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz Aug. 2.

Wirtz made his proposal only as a framework within which union and management might negotiate an agreement.

For example, in his suggestions for resolving the firemen's issue, Wirtz did not spell out the number of jobs to be eliminated, employ protective conditions or the cut-off date for which provisions would be applied to new employees.

Wirtz's suggestions contemplated a three-year contract but the unions in the version they accepted changed that to a five-year pact in their proposals to management.
