Let's Get Busy

If charity is indeed the greatest of all virtues and if there is truly joy in giving, then this week, which marks the opening of the Decatur Community Fund drive, should afford all Decaturites ample opportunity to be both charitable and joyous.

And if, as many of us have been told since we were children, there is strength in unity, then the Community Fund, a concentrated effort by the citizens of Decatur to provide financial resources for ten local charities should prove once again the truth of that age-old adage.

The united approach to charitable giving is a practice fostered by pressing necessity — we Americans are a people beset on all sides by the requests and pleas of both worthy and worthless causes.

If we had no united drive, no community fund effort, there would be at least ten, maybe more, separate drives during the year. This would mean endless duplication of effort on the part of the Decatur people who volunteer to help out in charitable works. It would mean countless interruptions for those who don't — to interview the solicitors, look for change, interrupt the TV show, etc.

The community fund board has united ten charities in one drive. The board screens budget requests and confers with officials of the organizations involved. It enlists civic-minded and industrious citizens and organizes them into an efficient and effective collection agency. For weeks before the opening of the campaign board members plan the endless details which always accompany such a larger project.

But this work, this screening, this organization, this planning is wholly dependent upon the final link in the chain. For the UNITED approach means more, much more, than the organization of several charitable organizations under a common name. It means more than the pooling of the efforts of 75 or 100 people capable of managing the intricacies of a fund drive.

It means, and depends upon, UNITED giving from each Decatur citizen. It means that at this time each of us must review both the needs of others and his own ability to contribute, then give accordingly. If each of us makes this review honestly and places the needs of others above our own, the $28,998 goal of the Decatur Community Fund drive will be met with ease.

Those of us who share in the bountiful plenty of America should be so thankful and joyous that little effort is needed to raise the drive goal. Those who believe that this money should be raised by charity, not through taxes, should be especially benevolent. After all, our obligations to humanity must be met. If we fail to do it by charity, or spontaneous giving, then we must resort to taxation, or enforced giving. This generally is not considered the American way, but if we fail to support the American way, it is the only other humanitarian answer.

Tell Council No Threat To Pope's Power

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Liberal cardinals from North America, Western Europe and Africa assured the Ecumenical Council today that no threat to the primacy of the Pope is involved in a proposal to enhance the powers of bishops.

A parade of prominent prelates strongly defended in council debate the idea that bishops of the church constitute a "college" or sacred body which shares with the Pope responsibility for the government and welfare of the whole church. Some conservative council fathers have voiced fear that the concept endangers papal supremacy.

Another highlight of today's debate was a vigorous rebuttal by Julius Cardinal Deopfner, liberal archbishop of Munich, Germany, of a speech delivered last week by Francis Cardinal Spellman of New York.

Spellman had attacked a provision in the document on the church now before the council which would permit the ordination of married deacons in missionary territories which have a shortage of priests.

Deopfner disputed Spellman's contention that the proposal would threaten the tradition of priestly celibacy. He said the deacons would be carefully chosen to meet special circumstances and would not be merely "second class priests without the obligation of celibacy."

Strong statements in favor of the "collegiality" concept were made by Albert Gregory Cardinal Meyer of Chicago, Paul Emile Cardinal Leger of Montreal, Franziskus Cardinal Koenig of Vienna, Joseph Cardinal Lefevre of Bourges, France, Bernard Jan Cardinal Alfrink of Utrecht, Netherlands, Laurean Cardinal Rugambwa of Tanganyika and Patriarch Maximov IV Saigh of Antioch of the Melchites.

Giuseppe Cardinal Siri of Genoa was the only conservative cardinal to take part in today's debate, and he acknowledged the desirability of some council recognition of the importance of the College of Bishops. But he warned that the bishops have no existence as a joint body and no power "except in union with the Roman pontiff."

Cardinal Leger said that no one should be afraid that the enhanced role of the bishops would in any way weaken the doctrine of papal primacy.

Both Leger and Koenig stressed that the collegiality of the bishops was not a new idea but has always been implicit in the traditions of the church and in Scripture.

Cardinal Meyer developed in detail the Scriptural basis for the idea. He said Christ entrusted duties and powers over the church to all of the apostles as a body and not just to Peter as an individual.

Cuba Refuses To Sign Test Ban Treaty

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (UPI) — Cuba announced today that it will not sign the Moscow nuclear test ban treaty until the United States changes its policy toward Fidel Castro's government.

Cuban Ambassador Carlos Lechuga, in a policy speech prepared for delivery in the General Assembly, said also that Castro's government would oppose a denuclearized zone for Latin America unless the United States gave up its Guantanamo Bay base and included the Panama Canal Zone, Puerto Rico and other military bases in the hemisphere in any such agreement.

Lechuga denounced U.S. intervention in Viet Nam, demanded freedom for Puerto Rico, called President Kennedy's Alliance for Progress a failure and drew attention to military takeovers occurring in Latin America.

Asks Cigarette Tax Collection Back To ABC

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Indiana cigarette distributors planned today to ask Governor Welsh to transfer the administration of the state cigarette tax from the Indiana Department of Revenue back to the Indiana Alcoholic Beverage Commission.

The department of revenue was given the collecting power by the 1963 Legislature.

Officials of the Indiana Tobacco and Candy Distributors and Vendors, Inc., will confer with Welsh Tuesday, following his return from Oklahoma City, where he is presenting today at a meeting of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission.

Leo Stemle, attorney for the vendors and distributors, said some of the group feel the timing of the transfer to the revenue department from the ABC, which has been collector for many years, was bad because the department already has numerous new duties.

The revenue department has responsibility for collecting the new two per cent sales tax and a new adjusted gross and corporation income tax.

"It is the belief of some of the tobacco wholesalers that it would be untimely to make the transfer now," Stemle said. "The ABC has about 50 or 60 men in the field, who have been checking to see that state cigarette taxes are paid at the same time they check for other ABC violations. We understand the revenue department has only four people in the field checking for cigarette tax payment."

Stemle said the distributors are also concerned because the revenue department does not have a hearing judge and a prosecutor to handle cigarette tax violations and that such action would apparently have to go through local courts.

Stemle said officials of the organization discussed the matter with chairman Joe Harris of the ABC and that he is willing to take back the administration of the tax if Governor Welsh transfers it again by executive order.

Stemle said the group also attempted to discuss the matter with revenue commissioner James C. Courtney, but he was out of town last week, attending a midwest tax conference in North Dakota.

Courtney, who returned to his office today, said he was not familiar with the questions raised by the tobacco distributors and wanted to check into their complaints before commenting.
