Purdue Center Glee Club Here Tuesday

The Purdue University, Fort Wayne center, glee club, which has established reputation for musical presentations before a wide variety of audiences, will be the feature of the annual "Sweetheart Night" of the Decatur E. U. B. church men's club.

The annual affair will be held at the Youth and Community Center.

ter, Tuesday evening, Feb. 25, beginning at 6:30 p. m. Tickets are now available from Norman Koons of the E. U. B. men's club, or any other club officers.

Starting in the fall of 1962 under the direction of Dr. D. Richard Smith, assistant director of the Center, the Purdue Center glee club has appeared before service clubs in Fort Wayne and surrounding communities, and many other organizations.

Composed primarily of Purdue Center students, the glee club also has among its 40 members a Purdue alumna, a faculty member and a few students from "next door" at the Indiana University campus.

A Lafayette native, Dr. Smith is steeped in the Purdue tradition of excellence in music as an extracurricular activity. As an undergraduate history major at Purdue, he was a tenor soloist with the varsity glee club. Holding the Ph. D. in speech from Purdue, Dr. Smith has taken graduate work in music at Ball State Teacher's College.

Variety is the keynote to a performance by the glee club, and for a closing number, the club traditionally sings the Fred Waring setting of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," featuring a solo by Phil Kauffman of Fort Wayne.

Rocky, Goldwater Blast Each Other

By United Press International

New York Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller and Arizona Sen. Barry M. Goldwater belabored each others views today while organized labor trained its guns on another GOP presidential possibility — Pennsylvania Gov. William W. Scranton.

Rockefeller flew to New Hampshire to begin yet another campaign swing through the state with the nation's first presidential preference primary.

Already on the vote-seeking trail in New Hampshire were Goldwater and former Minnesota Gov. Harold E. Stassen, who arrived Monday night.

In remarks prepared for delivery at Rochester, N.H., Wednesday, Rockefeller said that the so-called "voluntary" Social Security system suggested by Goldwater was "unworkable" and would "bankrupt" the Social Security system.

"Social Shambles" Rockefeller said Goldwater's notion would create a "social shambles" instead of Social Security and "take away the protection of our senior citizens."

Far away from New Hampshire's frigid hills, in Miami Beach, the AFL-CIO high command launched a sharp attack on Scranton and accused him of attempting to "sabotage" the unemployment insurance system through his proposals to trim jobless benefit rolls.

The attack on Scranton came in a resolution adopted by the labor federation's 29-man executive council Tuesday. AFL-CIO President George Meany said he doubted Scranton ever would receive endorsement for political office in light of his recent recommendations for revamping Pennsylvania's jobless payment program.

Hits McNamara's Stand Goldwater's fire was concentrated principally on Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara during a busy round of speeches and handshaking tours Tuesday at Lebanon, N.H.

He termed "stupid" McNamara's statement that U.S. missiles are more reliable than the nation's bombers. Goldwater said the statement showed that McNamara was placing more faith in an untested weapon than one that has been tried, like bombers.

But later in the day at Newport, N.H., he defended his recent statement that the United States should send a detachment of Marines into Cuba to restore the Guantanamo naval base's water supply.

Rockefeller had criticized the statement as "reckless."

"Was it reckless to send an entire fleet out to protect ourselves during the missile crisis?" Goldwater said. "I do not think so."

He called for a return to the "speak softly but carry a big stick" policies of President Theodore Roosevelt.
